Edward Is Proclaimed King; London Awaits Cortege of George V

Cannon Boom As Ancient Pageantry Heralds New Monarch.

Bachelor Ruler Leaves Ceremony to Return to Father's Bier.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 22.—Edward VIII was proclaimed King today and began the thirty-ninth rule of the British people since the Norman conquest.

From his throne, the 41-year-old bachelor, with a new solemnity because of his responsibilities, plunged into the affairs of state. He conferred with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and then sadly returned to Sandringham.

There his dead father, George V, attended by country folk, rests in the little parish church. Tomorrow his body will be brought to London by special train, arriving at 2:45 p. m.

It will lie in state in Westminster Hall until Monday night. Burial with a great state ceremonial will take place Tuesday at Windsor.

Trumpets Sound Fanfare.

From the balcony of St. James's Palace at Charing Cross, again at Temple Bar, and finally at the Royal Exchange, in the heart of the City of London, the new King was publicly proclaimed.

Ten thousand troops lined the streets while picturesque trumpeters sounded a fanfare and a 41-gun salute boomed in the honor of the man who symbolizes empire unity.

And the words of the ancient proclamation were carried throughout the mighty empire, embracing every continent, by wireless—a modern touch to the picturesque medieval proceedings. Many of Edward's 500,000,000 subjects heard them.

The bereaved royal family circle, except for the grandchildren, Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, was completed at Sandringham tonight with the arrival of the newly proclaimed monarch and other members of the family.

Tomorrow Edward VIII, accompanied by his three brothers, will walk behind a gun carriage bearing his father to Wolferton Station, near Sandringham. From there the funeral train will steam out at noon.

In Black and Purple Coach.

The coffin will rest in a coach painted in black and purple. The train will be pulled by the "King George V," an express engine which was displayed in the United States some years ago.

Arrangements have been made for a million members of the public to pass the catafalque during the lying in state in Westminster Hall.

Throughout the empire the ancient proclamation that was read in London similarly proclaimed Edward VIII to the populace. This ceremonial will be enacted in Belfast Saturday, but there has yet been no announcement of the procedure to be followed in Dublin.

It was reported the Irish Free State will merely announce the accession in the Dublin Gazette without public proclamation.

An enormous throng, gathered outside St. James's Palace, heard the Garter King of Arms, in medieval dress, proclaim in a loud voice from the balcony over the Friary Court:

"We, therefore, the lords spiritual and temporal of this realm being here assisted with these of His Majesty's privy council, with the numbers of other principal gentlemen of quality, with the Lord Mayor, aldermen and citizens of London, do now hereby with voice and consent of tongue and heart, publish and proclaim that the high and mighty prince, Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, is now by the death of our late sovereign of happy memory, become our only lawful rightful liege, Lord Edward the VIII, by the grace of God King of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Domin-

2 Hyslop Bandits, Trapped, End Lives

Vancouver, British Columbia, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Jack Hyslop and George Warren, last members of the notorious Hyslop gang, blamed for numerous western Canada crimes, committed suicide tonight when surrounded by police in an East End rooming house.

The gang was accused of robbing a branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce a week ago, fatally wounding Teller William R. Hobbs and shooting Manager George Winsby through the shoulder.

An underworld tip gave the police the clew to the men's hideout. Officers bearing shotguns and tear gas bombs stationed themselves in close formation around the building. A squad moved cautiously up the stairway and rapped on the door of the room the gangsters occupied.

Two gunshots roared in the room. When police broke down the door, Hyslop and Warren lay sprawled on the floor, blood gushing from self-inflicted wounds in their heads.

Laval Resigns After Socialists Desert Cabinet

He, 2 Others Spurn Offer to Reorganize; Fear Consequences.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 22.—Pierre Laval's "save the franc" French cabinet reached its long-expected collapse today, precipitating a serious governmental crisis.

President Albert Lebrun began at once to seek a new premier, but parliamentary sources feared the search would be long and tedious. The danger of grave "financial and foreign consequences" was predicted by the Nationalist minister of state, Louis Marin, who refused to sign the cabinet's collective resignation.

Laval and two other prospective premiers refused the job late today and it was announced officially Lebrun would wait until morning to continue his efforts to find a suitable man. The Radical-Socialist, Albert Sarraut, who was premier for a month in 1933, was expected to be the next to be consulted.

Regnier Mentioned.

There were prospects Marcel Regnier, erstwhile minister of finance, might be called upon at length to become premier and stave off devaluation until a new chamber of deputies is chosen in the spring.

Laval, who had held the reins of French government for the comparatively lengthy period of 7½ months, quit with the rest of his ministry when Edouard Herriot and three other Radical-Socialist ministers abandoned the government because of their party's condemnation of the premier's policies, domestic and foreign.

One of the reasons for the dominant party's hostility to Laval was what Leftists described as his vacillation between Great Britain and Italy on the Ethiopian question.

Laval put the blame for the cabinet's collapse squarely on the Radical-Socialists. He took the ministers directly from a cabinet meeting in the Quai d'Orsay to the Elysee Palace.

Tenders All Resignations.

There, under gala trappings strung for a diplomatic ball which was canceled with the death of King George V of England, the independent premier let his cabinet fall apart in front of the President.

First, he received the resignations of the four Radical-Socialists; then he handed the entire cabinet's resignation to Lebrun.

Refusing to attempt to form a new government, Laval said he had fulfilled his mission; that the franc

Sons Kneel in Silence at Coffin in Dimly-Lit Country Chapel.

Body to Be Taken To Capital Today

Queen Mother Bearing Her Grief Bravely; Funeral Tuesday.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Sandringham, Eng., Jan. 22.—Edward VIII and his brothers, the Dukes of York and Gloucester, walked tonight, to Sandringham's little parish church to kneel in silence before the oaken coffin of their father, King George V of England.

It was the last night for the newly-proclaimed ruler of the British Empire to be alone with his sire in the candlelit chapel where George so often worshipped.

Tomorrow the body will be taken to London for all the panoply of a state funeral.

The reverent visit of the dead king's sons followed quickly upon their simple homecoming to Sandringham House from London, where Edward today was proclaimed publicly King of Great Britain and Ireland, the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India.

Family Circle Complete.

The arrival of the Duchess of York and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, for the first time since prior to the late King's fatal illness, completed the family circle here, save for George's grandchildren.

Both Gloucester and the Duchess of York had been ill in London.

Soon after the great gates of Sandringham House closed on the bereaved family, the new King caused a wreath to be placed in the chapel of the church, alongside the bier.

The simple casket, inscribed merely: "George Frederick Ernest Albert Windsor, 1865-1936," still was decked with a single white floral piece, although the porch of the chapel was banked with blossoms brought by the sorrowful villagers who, during the day, were permitted to pay their final tributes.

So many came during the day that police marshaled them in a line four deep. It stretched around the old moss-covered walls of the church toward the Norfolk gate, a quarter mile away.

Workmen Guard Bier.

Clad in their Sunday black, four workmen of the great Norfolk estate stood stiffly at the four corners of the bier. A half-dozen Norfolk constables peered carefully at each visitor to make sure he was wearing the "decent mourning" required by medieval rote—either a black tie or a mourning arm band.

Poignant scenes were enacted as old men, women and children, cripples and invalids, filed or were taken past for a bow before the flag-draped coffin.

Tomorrow the King's sons will walk behind the bier on its journey to the railway station. Queen Mother Mary, her daughter and her daughters-in-law will follow in landaus.

The widowed queen mother was bearing up courageously, occupying herself for part of the day in answering some of the thousands of messages of condolence which have poured in from the corners of the world.

When the King's body, accompanied by a small military guard, reaches London tomorrow, it will be taken to Westminster Hall to lie in state until Tuesday, day of the state funeral.

From Westminster Hall it is to be removed to Windsor Castle for last rites in St. George's Chapel and burial with Henry VIII and others of the kings of the realm.

Carol to Attend Rites.

Bucharest, Rumania, Jan. 22 (AP).—King Carol of Rumania will attend the funeral of King George, it was announced from the palace today. He will be accompanied by several ministers and a detachment of the royal guard.

2 Students Charge Flogging; Women Assail Maryland Law

Acting on information that W. B. Marks, principal of hte Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School has been using a rubber hose to discipline boys in the school, the Woman's Club, of Woodside, Md., yesterday adopted a resolution asking the Montgomery Board of Education to seek repeal of an ancient Maryland law permitting school principals to administer corporal punishment.

Two boys who say they felt the sting of the hose wielded by Marks are Jack Mehserle, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Mehserle, of Silver Spring, and Ford Kelly, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kelly, of Silver Spring.

Mrs. Mehserle was one of those attending the woman's meeting. She was incredulous when the subject was brought up, refusing to believe that corporal punishment was used. She went home and interviewed her son, Jack, and said that he was one of the boys who had been flogged.

Jack Mehserle told his mother and reporters that two weeks ago he and young Kelly were taken into a room by the principal, accompanied by a teacher. The doors and windows of the room were closed and the door locked, the youth said.

Then, the boy said, he was struck across the back below the hips until he cried. The Kelly boy received the same punishment, it was said.

When Mrs. Mehserle learned her boy had been whipped, she was indignant. "This is certainly going

Bond Bonus Voted; Is Sent to Roosevelt

House Accepts $2,237,000,000 Plan by 346 to 59; Measure Signed, Left at White House; All Opposition Crumbles in Hour's Debate; Farm Bill New Inflation Threat.

By Robert C. Albright.

Overriding opposition in an hour's noisy debate, a $2,237,000,000 soldiers' bonus bill, providing full payment of the veterans in bonds, yesterday was dispatched to an uncertain fate at the White House by a landslide 346-to-59 House vote.

The Senate's indirect inflationary bond payment plan was substituted with ease for the previously passed House cash-payment measure, and the completed bill, signed and sealed by Speaker Byrns and Vice President Garner, delivered to the President.

Even as it sped down Pennsylvania avenue, a more serious currency expansion threat forged to the surface in the form of the $3,000,000,000 inflationary Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill. Four new names were added to the Frazier-Lemke "discharge" petition, bringing House signatures to 214. Only 218 are needed to force a House vote.

There were only minor protests from a few scattered conservatives as the "baby" bond bonus bill marched to House approval. Only 29 Democrats joined with 30 Republicans to oppose it. Voting for the bill were 265 Democrats, 72 Republicans, 6 Progressives and 3 Farmer-Laborites.

In view of his past bonus record, the President was expected to veto the bill, although his recent silence aroused uncertainty even on this point. Reiterating the forecasts of Senate colleagues House bonus leaders predicted the bill will become law, with or without the President's signature.

The Constitution gives the President ten days to approve or veto the measure. If he should fail to act in that time, it would become law anyway. Some associates of the President believe he will act positively, perhaps as he did last session, when he not only vetoed the Patman bill but appeared before Congress to warn against passage.

A telegram urging the President to take the veto route out was sent to the White House last night by Henry H. Curran, director of the National Economy League.

"Give them the same good veto message you gave them a year ago," the league wired Mr. Roosevelt. "That was a bad bonus bill and a good message. This bonus bill is

5 Nations Agree To Fight as One Against Italians

Britain, France, Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia United in Pact.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Jan. 22.—Official announcement that Great Britain, France, Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia will fight in common to resist any attack by Italy gave the Ethiopian conflict a historic turn tonight.

These five powers, dominating the Mediterranean Sea, will pool their military, naval and air forces if Premier Benito Mussolini strikes a blow at the British fleet.

Oil Embargo Up Again.

The mutual assistance pact assumed even greater proportions with subsequent word that the remaining members of the Little Entente, Rumania and Czechoslovakia, approve Yugoslavia's participation and will stand behind her.

Through a memorandum from Great Britain, the League of Nations disclosed details of the mutual assistance pact at a strategic moment.

The document was published just after the League's sanctions committee of 18 had decided to push on with the question of oil sanctions against Italy—at least to the extent of asking governmental experts to determine whether such an embargo can be practically effective.

Creation of an experts committee was regarded in some League circles as increasing the likelihood that oil sanctions would be applied.

Full Support Assured.

Italy, having defied the League by virtually refusing to countenance allocation of funds for use of the sanctions committee, created another sensation by warning she would protest the Mediterranean mutual assistance pact.

Special interest was attached, meantime, to France's reply to Great Britain on the mutual assistance agreement.

Categorically, the French declared their "support of Great Britain is assured fully and in advance" in the event of an attack on Brit-

Farm Bills Ask $440,000,000 For First Year

Measures Offered in Both Houses; Their Legality Already Challenged.

The Administration's two-year stopgap farm program was launched on the legislative stream yesterday amid a gale of predictions that it would be held unconstitutional, and with a number of dangerous Congressional reefs lurking on its course before it reaches the administrative harbor safely with a cargo of $440,000,000 appropriation for the first year.

Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, and Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), Texas, introduced identical bills simultaneously in their respective houses, providing for a Federal subsidy for farmers who voluntarily control production by co-operating in soil conservation programs, and conferring nearly unlimited powers on the Secretary of Agriculture to pay farmers from the $440,000,000 appropriation asked in a separate measure.

The bill amends the soil conservation act of 1935, broadening it to the dimensions of AAA.

Meanwhile, a new conference of farm leaders was called here by Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, to evolve a "non-political long-range" farm program to replace AAA, the Associated Press reported from Albany, N. Y. The conference will be held tomorrow and Saturday. Sibley said that Edward O'Neal, head of the Farm Bureau Federation, and Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange, were among those who would attend. He cautioned against any attempt to develop a farm program "in a hurry."

Senator George W. Norris (Republican), commenting on the Bankhead-Jones bill, said:

"I think it's constitutional, but not in the light of the Supreme Court's last legislative decision." He emphasized the word "legislative."

A number of Senators and Representatives immediately questioned the constitutionality of the measure. Senator Charles L. McNary, (Republican), Oregon, and Senate Republican leader, said:

"The Bankhead bill, further extending the soil conservation act,

2 Washingtonians Among 21 Given Carnegie Hero Awards

Widow of Negro Who Died in Attempted Rescue Pensioned.

Two Washingtonians were singled out for national recognition by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission last night and awarded bronze medals for exceptional bravery.

One, a colored laborer, will never receive his.

He is Sterling Calhoun, who drowned in the Anacostia River July 10, 1935, during a vain attempt to rescue Mary K. Kerns, 14, and her younger brother, Richard, 11, who had waded out beyond their depth. Besides the bronze medals, Calhoun's widow will receive $50 a month benefit from the commission.

The other, Daniel S. Terrell, 25, of 3024 Porter street northwest, saved the lives of Enrique S. de Lozada, 34, First Secretary of the Bolivian Embassy here, and his wife, Mme. Carmen B. de Lozada, near drowning 300 feet offshore at Bethany Beach, Del., August 19, 1934.

Calhoun, who was 32 years old and on relief, was fishing on the bank of the Anacostia River last July when he noticed little Mary Kerns calling for help. She had gone to rescue her younger brother, Richard, who had waded out too far and stepped into water 12 feet deep. She, too, was in water over her head when Calhoun heard her cries.

Casting off his shoes, the colored man started after them. They were 100 feet offshore. At the same time he shouted to a boy in a rowboat nearby. He then swam to a point close to Mary, only 10 feet from the shallow water. When the rowboat was within 15 yards of him he sank with one arm raised. Mary had already disappeared. All three were drowned.

There was a stirring aftermath to this heroic effort. Washingtonians, aroused by this act, discovered his widow was living in a ramshackle dwelling on L street with three children and no means of support. Sympathetic citizens of all races

Plate Glass Windows are Smashed; 44° Drop in 8 Hours Noted.

All-Time Records Broken Over U.S.

Traffic Is Stalled Here in Bitter Weather; Snow, Ice Due Today.

Hourly Temperatures.

6 p. m.	47	10 p. m.	27
7 p. m.	45	11 p. m.	23
8 p. m.	44	Midnight	7
9 p. m.	30	1 a. m.	3

Accompanied by a howling gale which blew in downtown glass windows, the worst cold wave of the winter roared into Washington last night.

It was the same great mass of cold air that settled over the entire East, South and Midwest, accompanied by snow flurries and bringing suffering.

The earlier prediction of the Weather Bureau was vindicated completely when the thermometer pitched down from 47 degrees at 6 p. m. to 3 degrees at 1 a. m. this morning, a drop of 44 degrees in six hours.

At midnight scattered pedestrians downtown were breasting or fleeing before a wind which reached a velocity of 61 miles per hour. Many plate glass windows were smashed by the wind.

Residents Fear for Safety.

Throughout the city residents feared for their safety at the height of the wind. Many called The Post, wishing information as to how long the gale would last. Many were afraid the roofs would be blown from their homes.

Along Maryland and Virginia highways motorists stopped, afraid that the high wind, sweeping unobstructed, would blow their cars over.

The temperature will probably go below zero at dawn today, it was forecast. The day will be fair and a slowly rising thermometer is predicted for tomorrow.

In some sections of the United States temperatures shrank to all-time lows. The frigid wave, rawest in the memories of many men, shrieked out of the Mackenzie Basin. It rushed through the Northwest on the wings of a 40-mile gale. Then it enveloped the Middle West with startling speed.

Dozen Lives Lost.

At least 12 persons had perished in the cold that ranged down to 30 degrees below on the International Bridge, linking International Falls, Minn., with Canada.

In Milwaukee, the 2-month-old son of a WPA worker Earl Harling, was frozen to death in his crib, because, his father reported, there was no coal to heat the house.

In many States traffic was paralyzed and schools closed. Wind-whipped drifts imprisoned several trains. Work on outdoor projects was halted in many places.

On icy streets and highways injuries multiplied to the hundreds. In farming sections rural mail carriers were forced to quit and sit close to roaring fires. In the cities thousands of unemployed men and women were taken into relief shelters, and overtaxed fuel handlers treated coal with chemicals to facilitate unloading.

A 48-mile gust swept Duluth, on Lake Superior, and plate glass show windows were shattered by its force. The Associated Press reported many traffic officers in Chicago were treated for frozen hands, faces and feet as the mercury sank to 16 below at 2 p. m.

Meteorologists in Chicago warned citizens of the Illinois metropolis that they might expect temperatures to drop to 25 below overnight and to 30 below in the suburbs. This will surpass the lowest mark in the bureau's annals, the Associated Press asserted, a reading of 23 below, entered back in December 24, 1872.

Minnesota Marks Smashed.

Minneapolis recorded every record in 45-year-old books smashed. There, in the teeth of a bitter wind that whined across the Mississippi and the plains, the temperature went down to 33.5 below. St. Paul shivered under a similar reading.

Scenes from central Montana through Illinois and from the Canadian border to middle Missouri resembled those in the Yukon at winter's height.

The Associated Press stated temperatures were scheduled to drop in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Penn-

Nye Committee Will Ask Funds To Continue Job

Unanimously Agrees to Request Less Than $7,500 to Finish Arms Task.

By Felix Bruner.

The Senate Munitions Committee yesterday decided unanimously to continue its investigation of events leading up to entrance of the United States into the World War.

At a meeting in the office of Chairman Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, all the members of the committee agreed to present a resolution to the Senate asking for "less than $7,500" to pay for further hearings and to write the committee's conclusions.

The agreement involved healing, at least to some extent, a breach in the committee itself. Last week Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, and Pope (Democrat), Idaho, publicly protested against tactics of the committee and withdrew from participation. Both attended the meeting yesterday, but neither would discuss it afterward.

Lansing's Nephew Protests.

A new protest against activities of the committee came last night in a letter to Chairman Nye from Allen W. Dulles, New York attorney and nephew of the late Robert Lansing, Secretary of State under Woodrow Wilson. Dulles, who made the letter public, accused the committee of violating the expressed wishes of the Lansing family in circulating among certain Senators excerpts from Lansing's private diaries.

Dulles said the diaries were deposited with the Library of Congress by Lansing's widow on the express condition that they would be kept sealed for 20 years. Senator Nye has stated that the committee had permission from trustees of the Lansing estate to examine the papers, but Dulles' letter asked for a correction of this "inaccurate statement." He asserted that "insofar as the estate of either Mr. or Mrs. Lansing is concerned, or any of their relatives, no consent to your committee's examination of

100 Children On Buses Saved In Snow Storm

Deputies on Horseback Rescue Pupils Buried Under Drifts.

By the Associated Press.

St. Clairsville, Ohio, Jan. 22.—Sheriff's deputies on horseback rescued 100 school children tonight from buses buried in 16-foot snowdrifts in this hilly, sparsely settled section on the West Virginia boundary.

Sheriff Howard Duff of Belmont County, who returned with the last of the rescue parties, said the children, some of whom had been stranded since noon, were all accounted for and "appeared in good shape."

"We brought them all in or left them at their homes along the way," the sheriff said, "except for 14 we had to leave at a garage at Fairpoint, 5 miles north. They will have to spend the night there."

The sheriff said deputies and highway department crews discovered a missing school bus containing more than 40 children half way between St. Clairsville and Glencoe, 7 miles south.

Two other buses containing 60 children, were located near Fairpoint.

"Actually, you couldn't see the buses at all," the sheriff said. "The drifts were 15 and 16 feet deep, and snowplows that set out simply bogged down and would not budge.

"The temperature was about 8 below and going down all the time. It was terrible. On the way we had to help about 15 motorists who were stalled or blocked by the buses.

Crawford had received a telephone call from Glencoe that a bus which left St. Clairsville with 50 students before 4 p. m. had not been heard from more than two hours later.

The driver of one of two buses that left at the same time bound north to Fairpoint telephoned that the buses were engulfed in tremendous drifts 5 miles from town.

He said the 50 children had taken refuge in a nearby farm home, but that facilities were overcrowded and they were without food or adequate heat.

Thousands Stranded by Strike Of Gotham Elevator Employes

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 22.—Thousands of office and loft workers were left stranded in midtown skyscrapers today when a sudden strike of elevator operators swept through the great garment and fur districts.

The walkout, involving porters and other service employes, as well as elevator pilots, was called in 200 buildings during the lunch hour.

Approximately 2,500 workers were ordered off the job in the initial strike call, and union leaders threatened a city-wide walkout by February 1 unless their demands for a 40 per cent wage increase and a 40-hour week were met.

Police estimated more than 120,000 persons worked in the area. Many of them, veterans of a similar strike in November, 1934, went without lunch while others trudged down seemingly endless stairways. At closing time they were faced with the alternative of spending the night on their benches and desks or hiking downstairs.

A two-and-half-hour conference between labor and employer groups broke up in what one union official termed an "impasse."

Another meeting will be held Friday morning.

The walkout began peacefully, but 100 extra policemen were thrown into the area to augment the regular patrol of 800 men.

The district covered by what union officials said was the first of a series of strike calls was bounded by Fourteenth and Forty-second streets and Sixth and Seventh avenues.

Move to Curb Supreme Court Gains Strength

Senators and House Members to Push Measures for Restriction.

By the Associated Press.

A movement to restrict—by law—the Supreme Court's power to invalidate acts of Congress took shape yesterday in both branches of the National Legislature.

Encouraged by increasing talk of such procedure in New Deal circles and an indication that President Roosevelt may have studied the possibilities, leaders of the movement planned active campaigns.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, said he would introduce a bill before the end of the week and make a speech on the subject as well, in addition to conferring with a number of his colleagues.

In the House, Representative Cross (Democrat), and Representative Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, have similar measures pending. They are working together and Cross said yesterday he planned a "battle if necessary" to bring the subject to the floor. Representative Maverick, of Texas, said he and his Liberal group were ready to fall into line.

Secretary Wallace, when asked at his press conference if he favored legislation to restrict the court's powers, declined to answer directly, but said:

"It's obvious there is a real problem. The essence of government is to prevent injustice."

Announcing support for Pope's idea, Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, said "the Constitution clearly gives Congress the right to say what the Supreme Court shall and shall not pass up." He and others pointed to the constitutional clause defining the duties of the court. It says:

"In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases, before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make."

Norris is the author of a constitutional amendment which would prevent the court from invalidating acts of Congress except by a majority of at least two-thirds, which he said under the present set-up would require a 7-to-2 decision.

"It's clearly impossible," he said, however, "to obtain an amendment at this time, and so I'm not pressing the issue. I shall be glad to support Senator Pope's move."

Aging of 'Straight' Whisky Is Ordered

By the Associated Press.

Aging of all "straight" whisky was ordered yesterday in new regulations for the distilled spirits industry.

The regulations, promulgated by Miss Josephine Roche, acting alcohol administrator, carry "the force and effect of law," and the FAA has power to revoke permits of companies which fail to comply.

All whisky labeled "straight" after July 1, 1936, must be aged one year in wood. The age requirement will be gradually increased until, after July 1, 1938, two years' aging will be required for all "straight" whisky.

The new regulations define "blended whisky" as a "mixture which contains at least 20 per cent by volume of 100-degree proof straight whisky, and whiskies or neutral spirits, if such mixture, at the time of bottling is not less than 80-degrees proof."

Gin must be labeled either as "distilled" or "compound."

Decision of Supreme Court Gives Ammunition to New Deal—Or Was It a Warning?

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

IN upholding the Louisiana rice millers' injunction suits against collection of AAA processing taxes, the Supreme Court seems to have given the Administration the talking point against the high tribunal which it has been seeking. Some New Dealers believe the ruling affords them a much-desired opportunity to hit at the court without becoming committed to proposals to amend the Constitution, concededly political dynamite.

President Roosevelt in his press conference said in effect: Oh, ho! Look at this court; it does not know its own mind; in 1922 under circumstances similiar to those in the rice millers' case it said that even though Congress passes an unconstitutional exaction in the guise of a tax, the collection of that tax can not be restrained by injunction because of a statute passed by Congress in 1867.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings fully agrees with the President's view. He thinks the court reversed its unanimous decision of 1922 and believes that the result will be a flood of injunction suits which may have the effect of shutting down Government revenue.

Solicitor General Stanley Reed, in his petition to the court asking a rehearing, made the sweeping prediction that "any impairment" of the forces of the 1922 decision or departure from the statute of 1867 "would destroy essential safeguards to the orderly and uninterrupted collection of all Federal taxes and imperil the normal functioning of government."

Since the Supreme Court made no mention whatever of the statute of 1867 or of the 1922 decision—contenting itself by terming the AAA taxes an "unconstitutional exaction"—it has not been fully established that the court swept away the prohibition of injunction suits against collection of taxes, thus reversing its previous decisions. But there is no doubt that the lower courts will so interpret the decision, unless a clarifying opinion is subsequently rendered.

When the New Dealers shout that the court has reversed itself, they may be on sound ground. But when they start talking about the court's action opening the way for an imperiling of the normal functions of government they are talking nonsense and know it. It would not be the first time that fears have been inspired by the New Dealers on baseless grounds to achieve their objectives.

In this case the objective is to restrict the court's activities, not to protect the "normal functioning of the Government," but to permit the Federal Government to engage in activities denied to it by the Constitution. Already a suggestion comes from Administration quarters that Congress require suits attacking Federal statutes to be heard before three Federal judges, instead of one, as is done when State statutes are under attack in the Federal courts. That would be a mild restriction.

But to make the contention that the Government may be crippled by the Supreme Court's invalidation of the prohibition of injunction suits against collection of taxes—if it has done that—is to confuse the issue. In the first place, even if there were no restraints at all on injunction suits against the collection of Federal taxes, the lower courts would not issue injunctions just because someone did not like to pay taxes. The seeker of the injunction would be required to satisfy the court that the levy which he wished restrained was not a tax at all but an invalid or unconstitutional exaction.

No successful attack by way of an injunction could be made on income taxes, customs and excise levies imposed for the general support of the Government. But levies imposed primarily not to get funds for the Treasury, but to regulate agriculture, or enforce a child-labor law or some other purpose outside of the jurisdiction of Congress would be subject to the attack.

New Deal spokesmen hardly will argue that Congress should be free to levy taxes for any purpose it chooses—constitutional or unconstitutional—and that the citizens' only redress is to pay on demand and then go to the trouble of suing the Government to get his money back.

Indeed, the Supreme Court's decision may have a very beneficial result, in that if the Government is deprived of revenue under laws of dubious validity it will take steps to bring about a reasonably prompt adjudication of them.

There can be no argument that it is a disgraceful situation when the people of this country can be subjected to unconstitutional laws for two or three years before the Supreme Court finally speaks. It is not the fault of that tribunal, but in some instances it has been the fault of the Administration.

Perhaps it is inaccurate to say that the Administration sought to thwart court tests of some of the early New Deal measures. But the Administration certainly did nothing to speed up the litigation. Test cases involving the AAA were in the District courts as early as August, 1933. One of them could have been heard by the Supreme Court the following winter had the Administration desired it.

But it did not. Indeed, the Administration made no effort to expedite a test on AAA until injunctions against the collection of processing taxes started to dry up the Government's revenue from that source. Then the Administration sprang into action—more than two years after the law was passed.

An angle of the Supreme Court's curt dismissal Monday of the Government petition in the rice millers' case, calling attention to the restriction placed by Congress on injunction suits against collection of taxes, generally overlooked: Was the Court serving notice on the Administration that it had no intention of submitting to restrictions on its jurisdiction?

Imports of U. S. Exceed Exports In 1935 Gains

Country's Second Lowest Favorable Balance in 25 Years Reported.

By the Associated Press.

The United States in 1935 recorded its second lowest favorable balance of international trade in a quarter of a century.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday this Nation sold $234,226,000 more than it bought last year. In 1934, exports exceeded imports by $477,745,000.

Despite the small 1935 balance, an increase in exports of 7 per cent over 1934 and a rise of 24 per cent in imports brought total foreign trade to the highest levels since 1931.

Records indicated that only six times in the last 60 years has the Nation had a less favorable balance than in 1935. In 1933 the Commerce Department reported a favorable balance of $225,000,000. In 1910, the balance was $188,000,000 and in 1896, $103,000,000. In 1893, 1889 and 1886, the balance was unfavorable—more was bought than was sold.

Gold Imports Highest.

Net gold imports in 1935 were the highest in the country's history, reaching $1,739,019,000 as foreign uncertainties led capital to seek a haven in the United States.

Net silver imports were almost three-quarters larger than in 1934 at $335,730,000—largely as a result of the silver buying program.

Commerce officials expect to prepare an analysis of the year's figures shortly. Some privately attributed the import gain yesterday to increased farm imports and improved business conditions in this country necessitating more buying.

Exports did not increase proportionately to imports primarily because of smaller agriculture exports, consequent to the drought and the AAA, and because of import restrictions in other countries, it was said.

$2,282,000,000 of Exports.

Total 1935 exports were $2,282,023,000, against $2,132,000,000 in 1934, and total 1935 imports were $2,047,797,000, against $1,655,055,000 in 1934.

Some indications that the trend of exports will be upward in 1936 were seen in the fact that they started substantial gains in the last third of 1935, after having declined in the first third of the year and increasing only slightly in the second third.

Imports, likewise, increased mostly in the last third, continuing a virtually unbroken upward trend that started in 1933.

Textile fibers, mostly raw cotton; machinery and vehicles, mostly automobiles and industrial machinery, and non-metallic minerals, mostly petroleum and products, led the list of 1935 exports.

Largest imports included farm products, textile fibers and manufactures, wood and paper, and metals and manufactures.

NLRB Test Sped To Supreme Court

A ruling by the United States Supreme Court on the Constitutionality of the national labor relations act was brought a step closer yesterday when Justice Jesse C. Adkins, in the District Supreme Court, refused to issue a preliminary injunction and then aided attorneys in speeding their appeal to the next higher court, the United States Court of Appeals.

The Gate City Cotton Mills, of East Point, Ga., and one of its employes, Mrs. Lola Echols, filed the suit. They asked the court to restrain the National Labor Relations Board from holding an election to determine whether the local union of the United Textile Workers of America should represent the plant's employes in collective bargaining with the management.

Mrs. Echols contended the election might result in a closed shop, a condition she said would deprive her of her constitutional right to bargain with her employer individually. Attorneys Frederick H. Wood, Reynolds Robertson, Richard H. Wilmer and Douglas H. Hatch represented both Mrs. Echols and the cotton mill company.

A. F. L. Is Expected To Condemn Lewis

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—Authoritative sources predicted tonight a resolution condemning John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization would be passed tomorrow by the American Federation of Labor's executive council.

For the third successive day the council, in quarterly meeting here, debated issues arising out of the action last fall of Lewis, United Miners' president, in resigning his council seat and forming "an organization within an organization" to further industrial unions in mass production industries.

Afterward, President William Green insisted the council had taken no action, although he said some announcement tomorrow was "almost certain."

It was learned authoritatively, however, the council was ready to condemn the purposes and activities of the Lewis committee—the federation traditionally has supported organization along craft lines—and designate three members to confer with it in an effort toward harmony.

John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department of the federation, appeared today to outline his body's views on industrial unionism.

Four Senators Recite Eulogies To Huey Long

Mrs. Caraway Makes First Address; Overton Says Election Is Warning.

By the Associated Press.

Huey P. Long returned to the Senate yesterday through the plaudits of his friends, but the shouting and the tumult that accompanied his physical presence were strangely absent.

In a quiet that was almost tranquil, associates of the Louisianan who was slain last fall heard him eulogized by Senators Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana; Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois; Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Hattie Caraway (Democrat), of Arkansas.

Senators swung their chairs around to give careful heed to Overton who delivered the first and most elaborate speech. They gave close attention, too, to Mrs. Caraway whose address was the first she has delivered before the Senate.

Overton departed from his prepared text to declare that the triumph of the Long organization in the Louisiana election on Tuesday was both a "registering of condemnation for his (Long's) damnable assassination" and "a warning to those who seek through Washington to run the State of Louisiana."

Overton spoke of Long's numerous battle with other Louisiana politicians saying "it took, Mr. President, the bullet of the assassin to cause the senior Senator from Louisiana to yield to his enemies. * * * He was at no time subservient to any man, set of men, or organization. He did not hesitate to enter the arena against any foe, however influential and however long entrenched in power. * * *

"While it is true that in the United States Senate he put through to final passage no bill or measure, yet it may be said without exaggeration that in the four years of his service as a member of this body he acquired a national following as an independent leader and established a reputation as a skillful debater excelled by none in our public life."

Mrs. Caraway mentioned Long's activities in her election campaign, saying "that he had little to gain if I won and much to lose in prestige should my campaign fail—everyone knows. I won and it is indicative of his greatness that I can stand here and assert that he never once presumed upon the fact of his assistance to try to influence my course in matters of legislation. * * *

"In his fight for the rights of the people, the bone and sinew of this country, he was not always polite but he was effective in keeping before the country the issues as he saw them."

Senator Lewis said he disapproved of many of Long's policies but that the Louisianan was "a man of courage."

"He neither feared a foe nor cultivated a friend at the expense of his convictions," Lewis said.

Senator Thomas, who attended Long's funeral, referred to the dead Senator's work for his State in education and road building.

Defeated Foes Charge Frauds By Long Group

Anti-Huey Contender for Bench Is Lone Leader of Opposition.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Jan. 22.—Anti-New Deal leaders of the Huey Long political machine throughout Louisiana today shouted in jubilation over the landslide victory in yesterday's State-wide Democratic primary.

The other side, the home rule machine, led by Representative Cleveland Dear, charged "wholesale fraud" and scores of election irregularities. They promised a statement would outline the entire position of the Democratic faction which in the caustic campaign pledged itself to abolish the State "dictatorship and return Louisiana to local self-government."

The count of ballots in unofficial tabulations was slow. Many of the parish election commissioners, under State machine appointment, were reported to have sealed the ballot boxes and forwarded them to Baton Rouge for official promulgation by the secretary of State without announcing the vote.

65,000 Majority.

The only parish vote rushed to a conclusion was the gubernatorial vote in New Orleans, where unofficial returns from the 262 voting precincts gave Judge Richard W. Leche, the State machine candidate, a majority of approximately 65,000 votes over Dear.

The latest unofficial returns from New Orleans and the State showed that in 756 of the 1,575 precincts Dear received only 81,674 votes against 191,654 for Leche.

The two elections for a successor to Long in the United States Senate fell to two of his heirs, Gov. O. K. Allen, organization candidate for the unfinished term, and Allen J. Ellender, speaker of the State House of Representatives, for the regular six-year term.

The vote in 257 of the 1,575 precincts gave Allen 44,201 votes and his opponent, Frank J. Looney, Shreveport veterans lawyer and anti-Long politician, 19,165.

Dr. Irving Ward-Steinman, of Alexandria, an Independent candidate, received 589 votes in this count.

Long's Brother Gains.

In these precincts Ellender received 43,816 votes, his opponent Representative John N. Sandlin, of the Fourth Louisiana District, 19,583, and Dr. Ward-Steinman, 390.

For lieutenant governor, Earl Long, brother of the late Huey Long, received 39,815 votes against 17,612 for his anti-Long opponent, State Senator Clement Moss, of Lake Charles, in 253 precincts.

It has been reported Gov. Allen may resign his State executive position in favor of Lieut. Gov. James A. Noe and accept senatorial appointment ahead of the April 21 general election in order that he may go to Washington and take the Long seat.

As each parish sent in more votes the majority for Leche was raised and the trend carried in the main all State-wide candidates for the machine.

One Anti-Long Ahead.

In one race of vast importance, however, the anti-Long candidate was ahead on the first returns with pivotal parishes failing to report. That was the Fifth District seat on the State Supreme Court heretofore split over majority opinions which have upheld constitutionality of several laws passed under the Long "dictatorship."

Associate Justice H. F. Brunot, of Baton Rouge, the retiring justice whose position is to be filled in the primary, is politically affiliated with the Long organization.

Returns from 42 precincts of the district's 234 precincts put Judge W. Carruth Jones, of Baton Rouge, anti-Long politically, ahead of Judge A. L. Ponder, jr., of Amite, by about 200 votes.

Tonight there was practically no showing to be made to determine whether the Long-controlled Legislature would be returned.

U. S. Denies Report.

Chairman Granfield (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the special House Campaign Expenditures Committee, denied here yesterday that the committee had authorized Federal agents to enter polling places in the Louisiana Democratic primary Tuesday.

Granfield said he had read in a newspaper that 26 Federal "observers" had been ejected from polling places. He said any report committee "observers" were authorized to enter polling places were untrue and "apparently an effort to discredit the committee."

Norse Consul Dies.

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP).—Olaf Bernts, 65, Norwegian Consul in Chicago since 1920, died last night of a heart attack. Stricken on a bus, he was carried into his home, where physicians found him beyond help. His wife and two daughters survive.

New Farm Plan Offered

appears to be an effort to avoid the recent decision of the Supreme Court declaring the AAA unconstitutional. I am not sure this proposal comes clear of constitutional complications. The Secretary is given power to make payments to producers who curtail production, although no means for benefit payments are specified. I hope some permanent plan will be evolved free of suspicion of unconstitutionality."

One rock looming on the troubled waters the bill must course was understood to be the attitude of Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., Wisconsin Progressive. It is believed that if the tax question is opened up by proposals to finance the new program by new excise taxes, Senator La Follette will re-offer his plan of last session to tax lower income brackets more heavily in order to secure more Treasury revenue. This would cause much debate and prolong the entire question's consideration, it was predicted.

While Secretary Wallace told a press conference that he believed the bill constitutional, Senator L. J. Dickinson, Iowa Republican, told reporters.

"No man could vote for it who cares about the Constituion. It will be examined closely when it gets out in the light. Consider this: The priginal appropriation for the Soil Conservation Service under the 1935 act was $6,284,000. For the next fiscal year $27,400,000 was asked. Now Senator Bankhead, before the Appropriations Committee today, asks $440,000,000. There seems to me to be a little room there for lot of deserving Democrats."

Referred to Bankhead.

Senator Dickinson was referring to the action of Senator Bankhead, who, after introducing his bill in the Senate, appeared before the Appropriations Committee to ask $440,000,000 for the stopgap plan in an appropriations rider to the independent offices' appropriation bill now before that committee.

This action was unanimously blocked by the committee, which is headed by Senator Carter Glass, Virginia Democrat, on the grounds that it wasn't logical or in the orderly course of business to pass an appropriation for an agency not actually created in the full sense as yet. For the Soil Conservation Service, as indicated in the remarks of Senator Dickinson, is actually a small agency at present, while the agency to be created under the Bankhead-Jones expansion amendment will be composed of the entire present AAA force.

Senator Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina Democrat and chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, was visited yesterday by Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, and Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, in what observers believed was an effort to win his co-operation while the Bankhead bill is before his committee. The committee will consider the measure for the first time tomorrow. He is believed dissatisfied with both the measure and the procedure of its introduction, but withheld comment yesterday afer the visit of Mr. Davis and Mr. O'Neal.

The Bankhead-Jones bill directly amends the soil act, which authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to acquire lands and give financial aid to Federal and private agencies to prevent soil erosion in the following manner:

Asserting that "depletion of the soil and improper use of the soil resources of the Nation impede the orderly flow of agricultural commodities in the channel of trade, endanger the re-establishment and maintenance of farm purchasing power, and otherwise adversely affect the national welfare," the act is amended to broaden its base.

Bill's Provisions Listed.

The Secretary of Agriculture, while definitely prohibited from entering into contracts "binding upon producers," is authorized to 'make payments or grant other aid to agricultural producers based upon:

1. Their acreage of soil-improving or erosion-preventing crops;
2. Their acreage of crop land;
3. Changes in the use of their land;
4. A percentage of their normal production of any one or more agricultural commodities designated by the Secretary which equals that percentage of the normal national production of such commodities required for domestic consumption.

This latter provision is the domestic allotment plan which also appears in the three-way optional plan of Senator McNary, providing for a higher price for farm products through application of the equalization fee, export debenture or domestic allotment plan.

Written contractual agreements are barred, thus tending to make the act constitutional, but payments to the farmer are conditioned upon his maintenance of "such acreage of erosion-preventing or soil improvement crops, or such acreage or production of agricultural commodities designated by the Secretary, or upon such utilization of land as the Secretary finds has tended to further the purpose of this act."

The soil act provided for a civil service personnel. This is broken down by the new amendment, which alows the Secretary to permit administration by personnel without regard to civil service requirements. At his conference yesterday Secretary Wallace definitely indicated that "very much the same machinery is needed," thus indicating that the AAA organization can be moved directly over to the new agency. This also explained the fact that AAA employes have not been dropped completely but merely "furloughed," so that these can be given preference in forming the new service.

Alfred Stedman, assistant AAA administrator, told the press the status of present employment under the outlawed AAA: That up to yesterday 1,017 employes had been dropped (furloughed), that 100 others had resigned or been transferred and that another 100 resignations or transfers were in process. All of these are from the Washington offices. None of the field force of about 1,000 has been dropped. The total employed by the dead agency includes 5,882 in Washington.

Secretary Wallace, in indicating his belief that the new act was constitutional, jocularly told reporters that it was in agreement with the Hoover plan to increase the acreage of legumes. "That's what Hoover wants," he said, "to plant more legumes."

Observers noted that while the first Bankhead estimate of the $500,000,000 cost of the new plan's first year had been cut to $440,000,000, the lopped-off $60,000,000 reappeared in a revision by Secretary Wallace of Administrator Davis' estimate yesterday that $237,000,000 would be required to pay off the Government's "moral obligation" to farmers who signed 1935 AAA contracts in good faith. For the Secretary said yesterday that $60,000,000 to pay 1936 winter wheat growers would be necessary, making the total $297,000,000, which is virtually the same as the McNary request for $300,000,000 to pay off the moral obligation, now before a Senate committee.

$1,000,000 for No Potatoes.

A new development in the farm situation came late yesterday in the declaration by Representative Lindsay C. Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, that he considered his potato control act unconstitutional in light of the Supreme Court's adverse decisions, and that he would ask for an appropriation of $1,000,000 to investigate the potato production and marketing problem before preparing new legislation.

Norman Davis Will Represent U. S. at Funeral

Washington Cathedral to Hold Memorial Service for Dead Monarch.

President Roosevelt named Norman H. Davis United States representative for the funeral of England's mourned King Goerge V yesteday, while in Washington churches arrangements were made for the holding of memorial services for the dead monarch.

Serving as Davis' aids will be Capt. Walter S. Anderson, senior Naval Attache at the American embassy in London, and Lieut. Col. Raymond E. Lee, the senior Military Attache.

Ambassador Robert W. Bingham is returning to this country and there was no time, the White House pointed out, to send a special representative across the Atlantic.

Davis already is in London as the head of the American delegation to the arms conference.

Cathedral Service.

The King's funeral will be held Tuesday at 11 a. m. At that hour Washington's Diplomatic Corps in gold braid and top hats will file solemnly with their ladies into Washington Cathedral where Bishop James E. Freeman will officiate at memorial rites concurrently with the sad ritual at which Englishmen of the Mother Church will bury their dead ruler.

An announcement of the services from the Cathedral yesterday said that admission will be by ticket only and that official invitations to attend are to be issued by the British Embassy.

Though seating space at the Cathedral is limited, every effort will be made to accommodate as many British subjects as possible, authorities said.

Memorial Today.

King George will be memorialized today at services to be conducted at 5 p. m. in the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. Two visiting clergymen, Dr. Charles Richmond and Dr. David Schraff, both of the Union Theological College of New York, will assist the pastor, Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, at the rites. The church quartet will sing special numbers, including a recessional.

Yesterday half-staff flags at the British and Canadian embassies were raised to full staff, while national emblems at other embassies remained in mourning. Inquiry revealed that the flags were returned to staff tops at noon in recognition of the proclamation of King Edward VIII, in concurrence with a custom followed throughout the empire.

The flags will lbe returned to half-staff today and will remain there until the funeral.

Jury Gets Fate Of Scottsboro Key Defendant

Death in Chair Demanded at Fourth Trial of Famous Case.

By the United Press.

Decatur, Ala., Jan. 22.—Assault charges against Heywood Patterson, 22-year-old Negro, tonight were given to a jury of 12 white north Alabama farmers at conclusion of the fourth trial of the famed Scottsboro case.

Patterson, key defendant in the case which in five years has grown to international prominence, saw his fate placed in the hands of a jury after prosecutors had demanded a death sentence for the "protection of Alabama womanhood."

Patterson, who for five years has lived in the shadow of the electric chair, is the first of the nine "Scottsboro boys" to be brought to trial since the United States Supreme Court overturned previous death sentences on grounds Negroes systematically were excluded from the grand jury which returned the original indictment.

Defendant Stolid.

He is accused of leading five other Negroes in a mass attack on Mrs. Victoria Price, 27, "girl hobo." The attack allegedly occurred aboard a freight train near Paint Rock, Ala., in March, 1931.

Dressed in unmatched trousers and vest, a blue shirt and blue tie, Patterson stolidly listened as Judge W. W. Callahan instructed the jurymen to determine whether Mrs. Price was assaulted, as she charged, and whether Patterson was guilty of the crime.

Earlier today the young Negro had denied from the witness stand that he participated in the assault. Looking across the little north Alabama courtroom at the woman who had named him as her ravisher, Patterson said:

"I never seen any women on the train and I didn't touch Victoria Price."

Patterson is the key defendant in the 5-year-old legal drama of life and death. It was his case that was carried to the Supreme Court. A conviction probably would mean summary similar convictions of the remaining defendants, scheduled to be brought to trial in the next ten days. Clarence Norris, second most important defendant, is to go to trial tomorrow morning.

Death in Chair Demanded.

Melvin Hutson, Morgan County solicitor, demanded the penalty of death in the electric chair be invoked "to protect the womanhood of Alabama," terming the alleged attack "a most horrible crime—a violation of women's most sacred rights."

The State based its case in the three-day trial on two major points:

1. Mrs. Price's positive and emphatic identification of Patterson as the Negro who attacked her in the freight car.

2. An alleged confession, related by Obie Golden, guard at the Kilby State prison.

In final arguments, Defense Attorney C. L. Watts, of Huntsville, Ala., sought to shake the validity of these points, asserting both were without corroboration.

Should Patterson be found guilty, it probably will be the beginning of another attempt to win reversal in the Nation's highest court. The defense moved twice for mistrial during the case, only to be overruled by Judge Callahan. Both times it noted exceptions, apparently laying basis for an appeal.

'Show Goes On' Despite Fiasco At Opera Here

'Cash and Carry' Orchestra to Be Replaced by a Single Piano.

When Edouard Albion, opera impresario, tendered a $1,500 check to musicians for the opening of his now much-publicized presentation of "Lakme" in Constitution Hall Tuesday night, he violated a written contract, forcing union players to pick up their fiddles and walk out, according to Albert C. Hayden, president of the local musicians' union.

Why, he was asked yesterday, did 47 musicians refuse to play, leaving some 1,500 Washington music lovers to hiss, boo and border on hysteria for nearly two hours?

"The answer is simple," said Hayden. "We refused to accept the check, first, because it was against union rules, and second, because the contract with Albion called for cash.

"Some years ago (1929), Albion operated here and wound up owing local musicians and stage hands approximately $7,000. This debt was never paid. The musicians were due $4,000 and the stage hands, $3,000.

"Our contract for Tuesday night, signed by Albion, stipulated that payment was to be made in cash before the curtain went up. Albion also had agreed to pay the musicians $150 and the stage hands $100 on back indebtedness."

It was not until 9 p. m., according to Hayden, that any effort was made to pay the waiting musicians. Then, Mrs. Albion offered the check, signed by Giuseppe Donze, baryione of the Metropolitan Opera Company and indorsed by several noted society and music leaders.

Contract Called for Cash.

"They had no cash. Our contract called for cash before the show. So we didn't go on. Albion violated his contract and there was nothing left for us to do," said Hayden.

Yesterday, Mrs. Albion admitted "there had been trouble several years ago." She said the Albion Opera closed at that time because of a week's local engagement of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

"We tried hard to bring opera back to Washington. Washingtonians wanted it. But an incident many years old forced our plans to end in a disaster which will go down in musical history," said Mrs. Albion. She added that neither she nor her husband plan to take action against the union.

But Tuesday night's happenings failed to dampen spirits of those backing the National Opera Association. The show will go on and "Hansel and Gretel" will be given as scheduled Saturday at 3 p. m.

The entire production, Mrs. Albion announced, will be offered to the accompaniment of a piano. Rudolph Thomas, New York conductor, will direct. The New York cast will remain intact.

Local music lovers rallied to the Albions' support yesterday. Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, president of the District Federation of Music Clubs, offered her assistance. So did Mrs. Cabot Stevens, Washington society matron.

The confusion and disorder of Tuesday's fiasco was forgotten in the new plans—despite numerous demands for ticket refunds from disgruntled persons who stalked indignantly from the auditorium after waiting two hours to see an opera.

Jewelry Holdup Suspect Returned

One of two men said to have held up Harry C. Karr, proprietor of a jewelry store at 14 Dupont Circle northwest, and robbed him of nearly $500 worth of watches January 13, was returned here yesterday by Detective Sergt. James J. Tolson, of the Robbery Squad.

Chester William Reed, 23, of Philadelphia, was arrested at his home January 14. At the time of the arrest, 14 watches were found in Reed's possession. Sergt. Tolson said Reed acknowledged his part in the holdup, but declared he did not know the name of his companion.

Tolson said Reed had been arrested in Philadelphia for the theft of an automobile. Reed is said to have stated he was on his way to Florida, when a man approached him in Union Station and asked if he wanted to make some easy money. Reed then said, according to police, the man gave him a gun and they held up the jewelry store.

Bremer Suspects Conclude Defense

St. Paul, Jan. 22 (AP).—Kidnaping was described as the "most horrendous crime" known to man as the trial of the three men charged with conspiracy in the $200,000 Edward G. Bremer abduction reached its final stages today.

George Heisey, assistant United States district attorney, opening final arguments, outlined evidence presented against Harry Sawyer, charged as "fingerman;" William Weaver, alleged participant in the seizure of Bremer January 17, 1934, and Cassius McDonald, Detroit engineer, who, the Government charges, exchanged the ransom money for other currency in Cuba.

The defense rested suddenly this morning after Sawyer and Weaver denied their guilt. McDonald did not testify. The case was expected to reach the jury either late tomorrow or Friday.

lons beyond the seas, defender of the faith, Emperor of India.

"To whom we do acknowledge all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God, by whom Kings and Queens do reign, to bless the royal Prince Edward VIII with long and happy years to reign over us."

Baldwin Received at Palace.

Immediately after the St. James' ceremony Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and the King proceeded to Buckingham Palace, where Baldwin was received by the monarch as a representative of the people's government.

The King, who broke tradition by flying here yesterday, the first British ruler to travel by air, had planned to return to Sandringham the same way, but threatening weather prevailed.

Accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of York and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, he left by train at 2:37 p. m. and arrived at Wolferton shortly after 5:30 p. m. They proceeded to Sandringham by automobile to rejoin the widowed Queen Mother, Mary.

After the proclamation was read at St. James's there was a minute of silence and then 41 guns in salute to the new King. The royal standard was run up over Buckingham Palace, a quarter of a mile away.

As this first proclamation ceremony ended the new King was seen momentarily to appear at a high the heart of Old London, the group sought and gained admission in accordance with the "ancient usuages and customs of the City of London."

window adjoining the balcony, crimson hung.

The official proclamation party, in carriages drawn by teams of five and escorted by lifeguards, drove to Charing Cross, then to Temple Bar, to read the proclamation.

When it moved to Temple Bar, in "Who comes there?" challenged the Lord Mayor of London's advance guard.

"The Officer of Arms, who demands entrance to the city to proclaim the King," was the reply.

A barrier of silken cord was dropped and the party advanced to meet the Lord Mayor, the Pursuivant crying, "The King is dead! Long live the King!"

Read Throughout World.

The proclamation also was made in the Dominions, in India and various colonies, and counties and municipal boroughs throughout the United Kingdom.

Vast crowds, clad in black, were at the four traditional points here where the proclamation was read. Flags were raised from half-stag in honor of the new King.

Twelfth century habits were worn by members of the College of Heralds, who acted as King of Arms, Heralds and Pursuivants. They bore such titles as Rouge Dragon, Rouge Croix, Portcullis and and Bluemantel for the four Pursuivants.

The Duke of Norfolk served as Earl Marshal, aided by six Heralds and three Kings of Arms. At every place the proclamation was read bands played the national anthem, "God Save the King."

Canada Hails Edward.

Ottawa, Ontario, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—A proclamation in the Canada Gazette today announced to Canadians throughout the Dominion the accession of a new monarch "and supreme lord in and over the Dominion of Canada."

Twice before that same proclamation, announcing the accession of a new King-Emperor, has been published in the Gazette, but never before has it meant so much to Canadians.

In almost every city and town in the country Edward VIII is known and loved. On several occasions he has visited Canada. His "stake" in the country, his "EP" ranch near Calgary, gives him a citizenship in the Dominion which no other King of the United Kingdom ever held.

Friend of Cody Dies.

Pierre, S. Dak., Jan. 22 (AP).—James "Jim" Lewis, 78, Pierre gunsmith who hunted with "Buffalo Bill" Cody, died today of pneumonia.

Lewis, who came here in 1887 and established a gun shop, was known to hundreds of sportsmen in South Dakota and elsewhere. His wife and four chidren survive.

Girl Train Victim Is Called Suicide

Miss Lillian Rubenstein, 30-year-old employe of the Securities Exchange Commission, whose body was found along the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks near Rockville, Md., Tuesday night, committed suicide, Coroner W. S. Murphy, of Rockville, decided yesterday. Miss Rubenstein lived in Washington at the West Clifton Terrace Apartments.

Dr. Murphy said witnesses told him the young woman threw herself into the path of the locomotive as the local train to Frederick passed Randolph Crossing, about a mile east of Rockville.

Miss Rubenstein left home at 3 p. m. Tuesday, saying she would be back for dinner. Authorities believed she took a train for Brunswick, Md., which left Union Station about an hour before the Frederick local.

Funeral services will be conducted at 10 a. m. today in the Danzansky funeral home at 3501 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in the Tifereth Israel Cemetery.

Brooklyn Is Terrified By 2 Escaped Bears

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Police sirens screeched and timid residents sought safe refuge in the Canarsie section of Brooklyn today after bears — number unspecified — were reported running at large.

Then, as rifles were being prepared for action, John Leone, a little fellow who works for a circus now in winter quarters, arrived on the scene, armed with soda crackers.

He called "Spot" and "Ted." They sat up and begged as two good bears should and docilely followed him back to their cages.

back to horse and buggy days," she said.

"My husband and I have tried to bring our children up in the right way. If there was need that our boy to be punished, we should have been notified."

Both the Mehersle and the Kelly boy said that they were whipped for giggling in their French class. They said the marks were visible for two days.

An unsuccessful attempt to get in touch with Principal Marks was made.

School Explains.

When asked about the happenings Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of county schools, said:

"I don't know the facts in this case, but ordinarily corporal punishment is a last resort where there has been continuous trouble.

"While the immediate couse may appear slight it usually is the culmination of a series of offsenses. At least we have usually found this to be true."

Both the Mehserle and the Kelly boy said that their punishment was not an isolated example. They said that many boys had been whipped the same way for various offenses.

They told of one boy who had been whipped several times.

sent her their contributions to save her hero husband from a pauper's grave. Over $600 was collected in this manner.

More than a thousand persons flocked to his funeral at Friendship Baptist Church and then followed to the Lincoln Memorial Cemetery in Anacostia where he was laid to rest on the quiet hillside. Rev. Guy Wills, pastor of the Bethlehem Baptist Church, paid Calhoun tribute during the services with this quotation from the Scriptures:

"For greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his fellow man."

New to Life-Saving.

Terrell, at that time assistant dramatic critic of the Washington Herald and now with Warner Bros., had never aided a person in the water when he made his daring double rescue.

He was on shore when he noticed de Lozada vainly battling against a dangerous undertow to drag his drowning wife back to the beach. Both were drifting farther out.

Hearing their shrieks, Terrell, who weighed only 135 pounds, waded from the shore, plunged through breakers 4 feet high and swam 285 feet out to the couple. Towing Mrs. de Lozada, who kept hold of her husband, he swam slowly with great exertion against the undertow, finally reaching shallow water. De Lozada, who had swallowed much water during the struggle, collapsed on reaching the beach and spent several days in the hospital recuperating.

21 Recognized.

In all, 21 acts of heroism were recognized by the commission. Eight of the heroes lost their lives attempting to save others.

In addition to the medal awards, the commission granted pensions aggregating $2,640 to dependents of four of the eight dead heroes and an aggregate of $1,350 to parents of two and the widow of another who died in rescue attempts.

In seven cases sums totaling $3,500 were granted for educational purposes and in six other cases an aggregate of $4,500 was granted for purchase of homes "or other worthy purposes."

Swanson Shifts Score of High Naval Officers

Pettengill Commandant of Yard Here; Defrees Goes to Submarine Force.

The high command of the Navy was further rearranged yesterday by Secretary Swanson when new assignments were announced for a score of ranking officers.

Among the changes was the detail of Rear Admiral George Pettengill as commandant of the Washington Navy Yard. Now in command of Battleship Division 2, Admiral Pettengill will succeed Rear Admiral Joseph Defrees, who goes to the submarine force as commander.

Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, assistant chief of naval operations, was selected as commander of Battleship Division 2, succeeding Admiral Pettengill. No successor was appointed for Admiral Taussig.

Capt. Arthur B. Cook, now commanding officer of the aircraft carrier Lexington, was named as the new chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics at the department here. He succeeds Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, who already has been assigned as commander of aircraft of the base force.

Reeves Comes Here.

As had been anticipated two weeks ago when Vice Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn was named to succeed Admiral Joseph M. Reeves as commander in chief of the United States fleet, the latter officer will come to the Navy Department here for duty on the general board.

Rear Admiral William T. Tarrant, at present commandant of the Eleventh Naval District, with headquarters in San Diego, Calif., will take over the scouting force of the fleet with the rank of vice admiral. He will be relieved from his present assignment on the West Coast by Rear Admiral Sinclair Gannon.

Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, now chief of staff to the commander in chief of the fleet, will relieve Rear Admiral Gannon as commander of destroyers of the scouting force.

Rear Admiral King, the present chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, will become commander of aircraft of the base force.

Fenner Succeeds Hart.

Rear Admiral E. B. Fenner, now the commandant of the Sixth Naval District, with headquarters in Charleston, S. C., will take over from Rear Admiral Thomas Hart, who now commands the cruisers of the scouting force. Admiral Fenner will be relieved by Admiral Henry V. Butler. Admiral Hart will come to the Navy Department for duty on the general board.

The command of Battleship Division 1 will go to Rear Admiral Claude C. Bloch, while Rear Admiral Walter N. Vernou, who now is in charge of Cruiser Division 3, will take over command of the cruisers of the battle force.

Capt. J. C. Townsend, who will receive his commission as an admiral in May, will succeed Rear Admiral Vernou in Cruiser Division 3.

President Roosevelt's naval aid, Capt. Wilson Brown, who is scheduled to get his commission as rear admiral in June, will leave the White House and become commander of the training squadron. He will succeed Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis.

Murfin to Return Here.

Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, who now commands the submarine force, will go to Portsmouth, N. H., as commandant of the navy yard there.

Secretary Swanson stated that "it is contemplated that Admiral Orin Murfin, the present commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet, will be detached from this duty in October." He will return to his old post at the Navy Department as judge advocate general.

Rear Admiral H. E. Yarnell, now the commandant of the Fourteenth Naval District, will be the new chief of the Asiatic Fleet.

The new commander of aircraft of the battle force will be Rear Admiral T. J. Horne. He succeeds Vice Admiral H. V. Butler.

Ice Traps Ferry; 12 Escape Unhurt

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 22 (AP).—Trapped on a ferryboat jammed helplessly in drifting ice on the Niagara River this afternoon, 12 persons, 6 of them passengers, spent an hour and a half of terror while the boat swept downstream and under a low bridge, which sheared off the pilot house and the smokestack.

All were landed unhurt, but most of them said that they had been "scared to death" or that it was "a terrible ride."

A shift in the wind opened the ice field and helped the crew to battle their way a mile and a half back upstream to their dock here.

A snow squall hid the double-decked old boat, the Orleans, from shore during most of her ride down the dangerous river, but lightened sufficiently to show the ferry drifting straight for a pier of the International Railroad Bridge. Observers feared she would sink if she struck the pier, but at the last moment the ice carried her past, although very close to it.

Nye Committee

the private diaries has ever been given."

Nye may present the resolution asking for more money today. It will be referred immediately to the Audit and Control Committee, of which Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, active opponent of Nye, is chairman. The resolution is certain to cause a fight when it is reported to the Senate, but with unanimous approval of the committee itself, its chances for adoption seemed fair.

Cost About $190,000.

The new funds will bring the cost of the munitions investigation to about $190,000. This amount is divided as follows:

Various appropriations already made by the Senate and spent by the committee, $125,000.

Federal WPA funds spent by the committee for clerical assistance, $35,000.

New York WPA funds spent by the committee for the same purpose, $23,000.

Additional appropriation to be asked, about $7,500.

Nye said his first act after receiving Senate authorization to spend additional funds would be to recall to the witness stand J. P. Morgan, Thomas W. Lamont and George Whitney, Morgan partners, who were temporarily excused when the opposition to Nye's tactics in "smearing" war-time leaders flared in the Senate.

The committee chairman said that he expected hearings could be concluded in 10 to 12 days, and indicated that he probably would not attempt to call all the witnesses whose names were on the list he recently made public.

Following the committee meeting, Nye made this formal statement:

"The committee has unanimously approved a request to the Senate for additional funds. The maximum amount determined as needed by the committee to complete its inquiry is subject to possible small deductions before the request is formally presented to the Senate.

"A resolution asking the money will be offered in the Senate as soon as there can be determination of these possible reductions. The amount agreed upon by the committee is less than $7,500."

Since the controversy in the Senate last week, when Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, took the lead in denouncing Nye for his statement that Woodrow Wilson "falsified" concerning his knowledge of secret treaties, thousands of letters have been received by Senators from people who insist the hearings should continue. In a number of letters received by Nye small sums of money were inclosed as contributions toward the cost of continuing the hearings.

Besides Nye, George and Pope, members of the Munitions Committee, are Senators Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan; Barbour (Republican), New Jersey; Clark (Democrat), Missouri, and Bone (Democrat), Washington.

Neutrality Bill Considered.

While the Munitions Committee was deciding upon future steps, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee continued to consider neutrality legislation. Secretary Hull spent two hours with the Senate committee, which voted to resume consideration of the legislation Friday.

Chairman Pittman said there was some sentiment in the committee in favor of public hearings. Such hearings would cause further delay, and Congress is working against time, because the present neutrality law expires February 29. If there are no hearings, Pittman said the bill could be reported out in two weeks. The House committee may report the Administration neutrality bill today.

Glassford Aspires To Head University

Application for appointment as president of the University of Arizona has been filed in Phoenix by Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, former chief of police here, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

Dr. Homer Leroy Shantz resigned as president of the University, effective June 1, to accept appointment as director of the Wild Life Division of the National Forestry Service.

Gen. Glassford became head of the District of Columbia Police Department November 16, 1931, and resigned on October 20, the next year. As police chief he was active in handling the bonus army of 1932, and was in office when the marchers were evicted.

Nanking Denies Japan's Claim Of 3-Point Pact

Eventual Recognition of Manchukuo by China Is Refuted by Statement.

By the Associated Press.

Nanking (Thursday), Jan. 23.—The Chinese foreign office, in a move interpreted by informed sources as intended to offset the impression abroad that China has pledged eventual recognition of Manchukuo, today characterized as "entirely without foundation" Japan's claim of a three-point Sino-Japanese accord.

Koki Hirtota, the Japanese foreign minister, made the contention in a speech this week to the Japanese Diet.

The Chinese foreign office statement recalled that the Nanking government last autumn proposed fundamental measures for the improvement of Sino-Japanese relations.

"In reply," the statement said, "Foreign Minister Hirota informed Ambassador Chiang Tso-Pin that the Chinese proposals in principle were not unacceptable to Japan, but at the same time that China must agree to three things.

"These were: 1. Abandon the policy of playing one country against the other; 2. Respect the fact of the existence of Manchukuo; 3. China and Japan must jointly devise effective measures to prevent the spread of Communism in Northern China.

"However, these three points were considered by the Chinese government to be too vague in phraseology to serve as the subject of useful discussion, so the Japanese government was requested to state concrete terms embodied in these three points.

"The Japanese government has not yet done so."

The foreign office statement voiced the government's pleasure at Hirota's reiteration of a fundamental Japanese policy of non-menace and non-aggression against neighboring countries, pointing out "with this as a starting point, no doubt relations between the two countries will be greatly improved.

Woman Is Saved From Sterilization

San Francisco, Jan. 22 (AP).—The courts saved a woman today from allegedly threatened sterilization and called on a 21-year-old heiress to testify concerning her charge she was illegally made barren.

Mrs. Mary Arevalo, 24, mother of four children, who said she fled from the Sonoma State Home to escape sterilization, won permanent release on a writ of habeas corpus.

August Fourtner, assistant district attorney, announced a subpena had been issued for Anne Cooper Hewitt, heiress to a fortune estimated as high as $10,000,000, to appear before Municipal Judge Sylvain J. Lazarus tomorrow. Other subpenas also were issued, but Fourtner would not name the individuals involved.

Miss Hewitt refused to sign a criminal complaint against her mother, Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt McCarter, whom she charged in a $500,000 civil damage suit with plotting the operation over the trust fund.

Milk Hearing Feb. 3.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—The State milk commission today set February 3 for a public hearing on the question of whether the Richmond market, largest in Virginia, should be taken under its control. WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Italians Extend Northern Push, Regain Position

Blackshirt Bayonets Rout Natives at Makale in Hand Fighting.

By the United Press.

Rome, (Thursday) Jan. 23.—The tremendous Italian drive on the northern Ethiopian front is proceeding successfully and all first-day objectives were reached, dispatches from Asmara said.

Stubborn Ethiopian resistance was broken by bayonet charges and desperate hand-to-hand fighting and the Italian drive to engulf Tembien continued unchecked, the dispatches said. The Italians recaptured two positions lost to Ethiopians in December when the blacks made a surprise attack.

The object of the attack is two-fold: Occupation of the mountains between Makale and branches of the Takkaze River and occupation of the big bend of the Takkaze, south of Makale.

While a right wing offensive proceeds, the Italian center, preparing to attack, opened an intensive artillery fire to destroy Ethiopian entrenchments, machine-gun nests and observation posts immediately south of Makale. After that an attempt will be made to occupy the Ambaalagi region.

Decisive Offensive.

The northern offensive, launched Wednesday, is expected by military experts to be even more decisive than the recent Somaliland front battle which lasted five days, in which 11,000 Ethiopians were killed and wounded.

The Ethiopian army on the northern front, variously estimated between 300,000 and 350,000 warriors, is expected to attempt an encircling movement to cut off the Italian lines of communication and attack from the rear.

Meanwhile, Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's Somaliland troops have captured Neghelli, capital of the fertile Galla Borana region, after advancing 235 miles since January 12 when the southern attack was ordered.

Ras Hailu Returns.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Jan. 22.—Ras Hailu, once-potent prince of troublous Gojjam Province, turned up in Addis Ababa suddenly today to belie reports abroad he had been poisoned and to declare he had made peace with Emperor Haile Selassie.

Hailu, brought to Addis Ababa recently from an island in Lake Zwai, appeared in good health, save for rheumatism.

"I am 57 years old," he said. "Despite the fact Mussolini says I am dead, I expect to outlive him."

Hailu once aspired to replace Selassie and led an abortive revolt. His presence here created the belief he was brought to the capital in a move to quell current revolts in the province, and it was thought he might call up his former subjects to be loyal to the Negus.

Rebels Slain.

A government communique Monday announced a number of Gojjam rebels under Ras Gasasa had been slain and others imprisoned, although Gasasa escaped.

Hailu admitted the Emperor was keeping him under close surveillance. He was not manacled, however, and was living in apparent comfort at the villa of the Crown Princess.

From unofficial sources it was reported the Ethiopians have discovered a secret Italian air base in the middle of the Danakil Desert, on the northeast at which it apparently was intended that planes would be in striking distance of Addis Ababa.

King's Death Delays Exercises On 77th Birthday of Ex-Kaiser

Wilhelm Is Mentally Agile, In Excellent Physical Condition.

By the Associated Press

Doorn, the Netherlands, Jan. 22. Wilhelm II, exiled former Kaiser of Germany, who will be 77 Monday, postponed observance of the birthday today until January 31 because of the death of his cousin, King George V. The exercises will be restricted to members of his family and household.

Although it is only rarely that the former Emperor receives visitors, once an invitation has been extended the recipient will find in Wilhelm one of the most charming hosts imaginable.

If the visitor comes with the expectation of finding an aging man with diminishing mental faculties, he is pleasantly disillusioned after about a minute or two of conversation.

Mentally Agile.

The mental agility of the white-haired, white-bearded, healthily tanned former monarch, who looks only 60, always surprises visitors.

On almost any topic the Kaiser displays a wealth of ideas and knowledge that give frequent proof of the youthfulness of his mind.

The secret of the exiled German emperor's health of body and mind lies in the unerring regularity of his life.

He arises at 7:30 a. m., then joins the entire Doorn household, from Empress to chauffeur, at brief devotional exercises which he conducts himself.

By 9 a. m., he and one or two adjutants are busy sawing wood. "When I am at the other end of the big saw," his grandson, former Prince Louis Ferdinand, says, "I simply can not keep up the pace. Grandfather's muscles are so strong and he is in such perfect form through years of daily exercise that he puts me to shame."

Gives Wood to Needy.

While the former Emperor does the sawing, his companions do the chopping into kindling wood. This is then carefully piled up in a woodshed and kept there until Christmas, when Wilhelm personally distributes it together with other gifts to the needy of Doorn and vicinity.

FORMER KAISER WILHELM II.

Light refreshment in the form of hot tea is taken at the end of an hour's wood sawing and chopping, and from then on until lunch, which is served at 1 p. m., the monarch studies or attends to correspondence and to administrative matters pertaining to the Hohenzollern estates.

His favorite topics of study are archaeology, theology, history—with special emphasis upon the question of responsibility for the World War—and aviation.

German, English and French newspapers keep him abreast of world events, as does an extended press clipping service on a variety of topics.

British Visitor Fears German Arms Program

Victory for Italy Would Help Hitler, Says Earl of Listowel.

Should Italy succeed in its Ethiopian campaign, Germany is likely to embark on a career of conquest which will be followed by still other ambitious nations, William Francis Hare, Earl of Listowel, member of the British House of Lords, warned Americans yesterday.

The scholarly-looking peer, making his first visit to the United States, frankly admitted the British "are greatly perturbed by the situation in Germany" as a result of Hitler's extensive rearmament program.

"That program," he said, "is dangerous to the peace of all Europe."

The earl, who came to Washington to address the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, urged the United States to adopt a neutrality policy in harmony with the League of Nations' plans for dealing with Italy.

He declared that Great Britain's reason for opposing Mussolini's aggression in Ethiopia is a desire to halt all aggression. He branded as ridiculous the prevalent belief in Italy that Great Britain is opposing Il Duce only because it fears for its own colonies.

Italy, he pointed out, had two colonies in Africa before the present conflict began, and Great Britain was unconcerned.

The nobleman, in referring to the New Deal, said the United States is "trying out all kinds of schemes that have been tried and realized in England." He called attention to the fact that his country has no court of law with power to veto an act of Parliament on grounds it is unconstitutional. Great Britain has no written constitution. The English people," the visitor said, "are accustomed to getting what they want through Parliament."

The earl expressed gratitude for the interest and sympathy shown by the United States in the death of King George, and said "it makes us feel strongly the bond between our two countries."

The British peer intends to tour the United States to arouse interest for an anti-Fascist and anti-Communist organization known as the International Group to Defend the Rights of the People and Their Representatives.

Mrs. Norton to Forego District Day Monday

Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday announced she would forego District day in the House next Monday. "The House calendar is practically clear of District legislation," Mrs. Norton said. "I think that is worthy of note."

The only important District bill before Mrs. Norton's committee is the Ellenbogen rent commission bill.

ain by Italy by reason of British collaboration in international action undertaken by the League.

France also informed the League that her arrangements with Italy do not go beyond the score of common obligations publicly assumed by all members of the League, and "they cannot, therefore, give any rise to any surprise or misunderstanding on the part of international opinion."

It was learned authoritatively that Spain was not invited to participate in the pact and that the matter was discussed only informally with the Spanish ambassador.

A denial in the British memorandum that the agreement applies to the northeastern frontier of France was made, it was understood, for the particular purpose of assuring Germany that the pact does not concern the Locarno treaty.

As for Italy, her spokesman said she probably would tell the League that dispatch of the British fleet to the Mediterranean was not a measure authorized by the League.

Responses from the other nations, the British memorandum said, left no doubt that they are ready faithfully to apply their obligations under the League Covenant as a result of sanctions taken against Italy.

Conversations between the general staffs of Great Britain and France, the memorandum asserted, did not touch upon the situation along the Franco-German borders, but "have been confined entirely to joint action in the event of hostilities in the Mediterranean, arising out of the application of sanctions."

At a closed session of the League Council, the transfer of 75,000 Swiss francs to the sanctions committee, for expenses, was voted over the vigorous protest of Baron Pompeo Aloisi, of Italy.

The new committee on oil sanctions will meet next week to discuss the projected embargo from the standpoints of supply and transportation. Another sub-committee of experts, already existing, will seek to determine whether current sanctions, applied in an effort to shorten Italy's war with Ethiopia, are effective.

Maxim Litvinoff, of Russia, patently alluding to the United States, opposed the suggestion that the oil committee meet next week on the premise that the attitude of non-member nations should first be determined. He was outvoted, however.

Paris Fights Berlin's Entry.

London, Jan. 22 (AP).—British efforts to bring Germany and other powers into the four-power naval conference are strongly opposed by the French delegation, it was learned today.

The French insist it would be a further violation of military clauses of the Versailles Treaty to permit Germany to participate.

It was understood the British believe the French, however, will withdraw their objection. Should Paris do so, Russia and perhaps other powers also would be invited.

Because of the death of King George, sessions of the conference have been postponed until next Wednesday, but a technical sub-committee will meet tomorrow to continue drafting recommendations on a proposed agreement for the exchange of naval building information.

President Cites 50-Year Work Of Carrie Catt

Feminist Applauded for Her 'Public Service' and 'Peace Leadership.'

Warm congratulations on completion of half a century in "public service" were extended to Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, venerable feminist, yesterday by President Roosevelt.

The visit of Mrs. Catt and a delegation of women with the President was the high point of the second day's session here of the National Conference on the Cause and Cure of War.

As the president of 11 national organizations participating in the conference watched, President Roosevelt read and then presented to Mrs. Catt the following letter:

"Our old friendship, dating back to the days when I was a very young State Senator in 1911, would be sufficient reason for me to write you on your completion of half a century of public service. But there is a greater reason—because the whole country applauds you and your very great contributions to our well-being.

"The many years of devoted work which you gave to the cause of woman's suffrage have long since been justly rewarded, not only by the passage of the Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution in our own country, but also by marked improvement in the status of women throughout the world.

"Those of us who are directly concerned with the maintenance and encouragement of peace between nations are also grateful to you for the splendid leadership you give to the cause of peace and the furtherance of the prevention of war.

"May you continue for many years to come as the strong and active captain in these noble objectives of a better civilization."

Mrs. Catt thanked President Roosevelt, both for the letter and for his appointment of women to the Cabinet and other high Government posts.

Mr. Roosevelt voiced his approval when told members of the delegation hoped to have Congress authorize the mint to strike a special medal commemorating Mrs. Catt's 50 years' of public service.

A bleak neutrality picture was painted last night for delegates to the conference by Books Emeny, educational director of the Foreign Affairs Council of Cleveland, and Philip C. Jessup, professor of public law at Columbia University.

The former warned "the cost of our contemplated neutrality policy may be that we shall set in motion forces which will actually defeat the purposes of our program of action."

"Current proposals for neutrality legislation offer illusory safeguards for the future," said Jessup.

A neutrality policy under which the United States would heap economic punishment upon aggressor nations would fail the true definition of the term in that only one set of countries, those belonging to the dissatisfied or peace-disturbing group, would be penalized, said Emeny.

"We will not prevent war elsewhere," he declared, "through depriving others of instruments of war, but will rather drive, particularly the dissatisfied and poorer nations, to more extreme measures for national self-protection, increasing thereby the dangers of world conflict and our own ultimate involvement."

Following the same line of reasoning, Jessup said:

"There is little use proceeding on the theory that contacts with belligerents must be eliminated unless all war-provoking contacts are cut off. The Nye-Clark bill approaches closer to the logical extremes of this policy than does the Administration bill.

"Neutrality is an international, not a domestic, status and must therefore be regulated by international agreement and solely by domestic legislation. The Nye-Clark bill seems to recognize this fact. The Administration bill does not."

Some system of collective security must ultimately replace the present "anarchy" of competitive armaments, said Charles G. Fenwick, political science professor of Bryn Mawr College, at the day session.

"We have concentrated our attention too long upon the mere repression of violence, important as that task is, if the other problems are to be solved," said Fenwick. "We have not concerned ourselves sufficiently with the problem of international justice.

"The great objective now before us is to work out the conditions of a stable economic order, and to attain that order the more highly favored nations must be willing to pay a price for peace."

Thomas J. Watson, industrialist, urged business and government to cease their bickering with each other by making mutual concessions based on past experience. He stressed the importance of adjusting trade barriers, international stabilization of currencies, settlement of world debts and control of armaments as steps toward lasting peace.

Watson is president of the International Business Machines Corporation, chairman of the American section of the International Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

A defense of the Versailles Treaty, which has been branded in many quarters as the cause of present unrest in Germany, was voiced by Jame T. Shotwell, director of the division of economics and history, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Laval Resigns

was "intact" and that the budget had been cut one-fifth.

"The first signs of returning economic and agricultural activity are apparent," he said; peace has been maintained despite "grave difficulties beyond our borders."

"Our obligations to the League of Nations have been observed," he added, "our friendships and alliances are intact and the independence of our foreign policy has been assured and reinforced."

Jeanneney, Boulsson Decline.

Jules Jeanneney, president of the Senate, was asked first to form a new cabinet, but his refusal was a foregone conclusion. Then Fernand Boulsson, president of the Chamber of Deputies and a former premier, declined.

Concern over keeping the confidence of French leaders spurred the search for a new government, for the treasury must borrow 8,000,000,000 francs ($528,000,000) within the next few months.

M. Herriot, former Radical-Socialist President, said in his own letter of resignation that the motion of the party's executive committee, condemning Laval's policies, made it impossible for the Radicals to remain in the government.

It seemed, he wrote, that "they could no longer help give the necessary guarantee of a majority in the Chamber."

The Nationalist-Marin, in another separate letter, declared the crisis resulted from "anti-constitutional and anti-parliamentary procedure" of the Radical-Socialists.

Both Herriot and Marin were ministers of state. Laval's was the 100th government of the third French republic.

State Will Not Press For Mrs. Root's Death

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Mrs. Daisy Root, Memphis housewife charged with avenging her husband's interest in a red-headed hotel cigaret girl by slaying him, today learned the State will not seek the death penalty in her murder trial.

The State charged Mrs. Root shot her husband to death after the couple left a "reconciliation party" at a downtown hotel, where Root allegedly paid attention to Lucille Underwood, red-headed 19-year-old cigarette girl.

A jury probably will be completed tomorrow.

Two Maryland Groups to Map Sales Tax Fight

Montgomery Citizens Will Join Prince Georges to Block Levy.

Citizens of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties will meet Monday with the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce to map plans for a fight against the Maryland sales tax. The meeting will be held at the Terrapin Inn, College Park.

The session will be an outgrowth of the Chamber of Commerce's invitation to the anti-sales tax committee of the Prince Georges Exchange Club, extended with a view to formulating a proposed substitution for the tax.

The one year period of duration, set by the last Legislature, will expire this June and it is believed that unless there is a determined resistance or a plausible substitution offered, the tax will be imposed for another year.

Members of the Exchange Club committee who will meet with the Chamber of Commerce are Robert W. McCullough, Walter L. Green, E. F. Zalzak, and Samuel Harvey.

There has been a steady decrease in the number of cases of diphtheria reported in Prince Georges County in the past nine years, according to Dr. A. B. Hooton, county health officer.

Dr. Hooton said there was one discordant note in this record—a small outbreak of the disease in some of the towns along or near the Baltimore boulevard and Rhode Island avenue between Berwyn and Mount Rainier. This outbreak occurred since October.

During this outbreak there were seven cases reported in Mount Rainier, one in Hyattsville, one in Cottage City, one in Takoma Park, and one in Brentwood.

"Another preventable disease, typhoid fever, in a lesser degree still occurs. This may easily be prevented by either thorough sanitation or inoculation. Nineteen cases have been reported during the year, three of which developed in one home during December," Dr. Hooton reported.

Another petition, said to bear 300 signatures, was filed with the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners yesterday asking the establishment of a highway over the old W. B. & A. Railroad roadbed.

Fifteen old age pensions were approved at a recent meeting of the Prince Georges County Welfare Board. This brings the total number of pensions to 18.

Through its Americanism committee the American Legion Post No. 60, of Laurel, Md., has secured safety driving posters from the American Automobile Association for every classroom in the local schools. They will also be posted in all public buildings.

The Laurel (Md.) Welfare Association has named the following committee to take charge of contributions for needy families: Mrs. J. Bradley Anderson, Mrs. Thomas Murphy, Mrs. J. Bryan Hobbs and Mrs. Vinton D. Cockey.

They will meet at the National Guard Armory between 1 p. m. and 4 p. m. each Friday to distribute the orders brought in from grocery stores. Each family in the town has been asked to place standing orders at the stores for delivery at these periods.

Members of the Moran Club of St. Ignatius Church, Oxon Hill, Md., are making arrangements for the first club dance, to be held at St. Ignatius Hall tomorrow night. Miss Helen Gibbons is secretary of the club.

Staff Sergt. Earl Hendricks, U. S. A., a veteran of the Boxer Rebellion and for the past ten years a member of the military staff assigned to the University of Maryland, will be retired January 31, it has been announced. He will make his home in West Virginia.

Thirty-odd years ago Sergt Hendricks entered the military service through the Coast Artillery and served in China. He transferred to the Infantry shortly afterward and was in this branch of the service during the World War.

In 1920 he was assigned to Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, and later to Maryland University. For the past seven years he has coached the university's women's rifle team. His retirement was granted after a long illness at Walter Reed Hospital.

He will be succeeded by 27-year-old Corpl. C. J. Uhrinak, formerly of Fort Washington. Corpl. Uhrinak, who will be promoted to a sergeant, has been twice commended for efficient tactical work in the field. He is serving his first enlistment. He will also coach the rifle team at Maryland Univeristy.

Shooting its first match of the season, the women's rifle team of the University of Maryland won over the University of Indiana by a score of 493 to 484. Each team fired on its home range.

Policemen Who Killed Man in Battle Freed

Policemen Hanford P. Miller and Horace F. Skinner, assigned to the hack inspector's office, were exonerated yesterday by a coroner's jury in connection with the fatal shooting of Clarence Walker, colored, 36, of 643½ Third street northwest.

Walker was shot January 15 in a running gun battle with the two policemen, who told the jury that they observed Walker shooting at another man as he ran down Bates street northwest. They gave chase. Miller was shot in the lobe of the right ear by Walker, who was wounded three times by the policemen. He died later at Freedmen's Hospital.

Howard Library Given $241,077 Allotment

Secretary Harold L. Ickes, public works administrator, announced yesterday an additional allotment of $241,077 for construction and equipment of a library building at Howard University. The original allotment was $558,923, and the addition brings the allotment to $800,000, as was proposed in plans considered by the university trustee board two years ago, before the NRA affected seriously the cost of building materials.

Plans of the trustees originally were for a library building to be erected on the site of the university main building, which has been supplanted largely for classroom purposes by completion of Frederick Douglass Memorial Hall. Library facilities are supplied by the Carnegie Library on the university campus and the recent removal of the law library to the school of law building, also a part of the campus group.

Sub-Zero Cold Due Here

sylvania, Kentucky and adjacent States as winter moved its storm troops east.

In the region near Norton, Va., a near-blizzard raged last night. The snowfall was so heavy that motorists could distinguish the highway only with difficulty, the Associated Press reported.

Route 52, between Suffolk and Richmond, was blocked when the Blackwater River overflowed, washing away bridge approaches. It will be four or five days after the water subsides before repairs can be made.

Snow swirled in other States, and many highways were blocked in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Ohio and the Dakotas.

Adding a freakish touch of contrast to Nature's grim drama, Goodland, Kans., normally one of the Sunflower State's cold spots, basked in the comparatively balmy temperature of 52 degrees at 1 p. m., while the mercury stood at near zero in the eastern part of that Commonwealth.

This high temperature, scientists said, was the result of a low pressure area extending southeastward from Havre, Mont., across Wyoming, northeastern Colorado and western Kansas.

Officials here last night said that there was every possibility the low reading expected this morning will surpass last year's record low of 2 below last January 28.

The Weather Bureau issued the following storm warning: Advisory 10 p. m., storm warnings changed to northwest, Cape Hatteras to Boston, Mass. Disturbance of marked intensity, moving rapidly eastward with centers over Maryland and northwestern New York will be followed by rapidly rising pressure and northwest or west gales late tonight or Thursday.

While so much of the Nation fought the offensive of winter yesterday, Washington was experiencing temperatures that would not be considered unusual on an April day.

Shoppers in top coats, many of them bareheaded, walked the streets in the warm sun as the mercury reached a maximum of 48 at 4 p. m.

Icy pavements here took their toll, however, as traffic crawled cautiously to avoid mishap.

Frank Fulk, 50, of the 400 block of K street, suffered a possible skull fracture when he slipped and fell near his home. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital. David Gossett, 31, of the 5000 block of Georgia avenue, slipped and fell as the worked on the roof of a restaurant in the 1400 block of K street. Crashing to the ground, 22 feet below, he was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians found he had suffered a possible skull fracture and internal injuries.

On the lighter side of things, District residents sharpened their ice skates, with the prospect of sport on the Mirror Pool.

Women Voters Hear Glass Foe Attack Utilities

Pay Sought for Volunteer Firemen in Arlington; School Unit Backed.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar 500. Clarendon, Va.

Randolph Leigh, of McLean, Va., opposing Senator Carter Glass for re-election, addressed the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County at their meeting yesterday at Livingstone Heights. He declared the rates of the public utilities as adjusted by the Federal Power Commission are too high.

He said the interests of the people would be better served if the corporations were administered to give more benefit to stockholders and wage earners instead of the directors and officers and that some officers abuse their power by paying themselves too much, thereby working a hardship on both the investors and employes.

Thomas R. Mechem, member of the Clarendon Fire Department, appeared before the organization and advocated salaries for volunteer firemen. The matter was referred to the civic committee for study and report.

The organization, which previously endorsed the proposal for the erection of a junior high school heard Mrs. Ruby G. Simpson, member of the county school board, report that after careful investigation both the county board and school board have unanimously agreed that nothing but a bond issue will make the project possible.

Present plans are to build the first unit, which will take care of approximately 600 children, Mrs. Simpson said the second and third units will be erected later. It is estimated that the building fully equipped will cost $175,000.

In order that the building may be ready for the opening of the school term next fall she said it was necessary to start construction not later than April 1.

Before anything can be done a petition will have to be circulated and signed by not less than 25 per cent of the voters of the county, after which the judge of the circuit court will set a date for the election.

After discussion on how the county's share of the proceeds from the sale of liquor in the State should be spent, the organization went on record that none of the funds received by the county should be earmarked "for schools."

The organization favored proposals to amend the county zoning ordinance to prohibit the erection of apartment houses within any residential area. The civic committee was instructed to attend the meeting of the zoning appeal board which meets next Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the courthouse.

P. A. Howard was re-elected president of the Rosslyn Loan Co. at its annual meeting, held in its offices at Rosslyn Park last night.

Other officers are Burton A. Thissell, vice president; Will W. Douglas, treasurer, and Lawrence W. Douglas, secretary.

Members of the board of directors are John E. Fowler, P. A. Howard, Burton A. Thissell, A. L. Freedman, Will W. Douglas, Lawrence W. Douglas and Howard B. Fields.

Meeting Tuesday night at the George Mason Hotel, at Alexandria, the Business and Professional Woman's Club of Arlington County, unanimously went on record in favor of the construction of a junior high school, one unit of which should be completed by the opening of the fall term. They favor the building of three units in the county and offered their support to the school board.

The Arlington County Rotary Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting today at the Washington Golf and Country Club at 12:30 o'clock.

Horace Russell, general counsel of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, will be the guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club at 12:30 o'clock today in the George Mason Hotel. The program is in charge of Thomas M. Jones and Thomas Scott 4th.

Harry F. Kennedy, president of the club, will welcome two new members, Dr. Francis I. Bloise and Chester F. Anderson, and also the return of a former member, T. J. Moore.

Kennedy has announced the meeting of the board of directors will be held at his home Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

Charles E. Slagle, manager of the George Mason Hotel, has announced plans for a week of entertainment, beginning on February 8, in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the opening of that hostelry. The hotel was built in 1926 with funds subscribed by Alexandrians, and under management of the American Hotels Corporation.

The celebration will end on February 14, with the hotel keeping open house, when Peggy Clarke will have charge of the affair and masters of ceremonies will be Brooke Johns and Dan S. Hollenga.

Superintendent of Schools T. C. Williams has announced that registration for the second semester in the elementary schools will be held today, tomorrow and Monday, from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. All new first-grade pupils will register today.

The pupils who finish the Jefferson and Mount Vernon grade school work on January 24 will not be able to enter high school until February 3, owing to the difference in time of opening the schools. The registration dates for high school will be January 30, 31 and February 3.

Lieut. Col. Seymour Bullock, member of the South Bend (Ind.) Rotary Club, and a noted authority on American history, was guest speaker at the meeting of the Alexandria Rotary Club on Tuesday, talking on "Two Men From the South, Jefferson Davis and Abraham Lincoln." Col. Bullock compared the two Presidents of the period of the War Between the States, saying both were born in Kentucky, in log houses, and both were in the military service, Davis a graduate of West Point and Lincoln a captain of militia.

He pointed out a curious fact that one of Lincoln's best speeches was one upholding the right of a State to secede, made at the time Texas separated from Mexico, while one of Davis' best speeches was to the effect that no part of the Constitution could be nullified.

Members of the Alexandria Nurses Association will attend the Eighth District Nurses Association of Virginia Conference on Saturday in the Loudoun County Hospital, at Leesburg.

Farm Expert Outlines Agricultural Program

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 22.—A permanent program of agricultural production based on land use, as a successor to the AAA, was suggested here yesterday by W. H. Bryne, extension agronimist of the V. P. I. extension division, at a meeting of the Rockingham County advisory agriculture board.

Bryne declared that with two years experience with the AAA, farmers are convinced that an effective balance between agricultural production and consumption demand results in a fair value for farm products, and that, a fair exchange value for farm products results in improved business conditions.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrants Name Four Gangsters In Wilson Case

State May Need a Month to Bring McDermott Back From Alcatraz.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Rockville, Md., Jan. 22.—Bench warrants for the four Washington gangsters he hopes to send to the gallows for the mistaken-identity murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route carrier, October 23, 1934, were issued here today by State's Attorney James H. Pugh.

The warrants followed indictment of the four, who are all serving sentences for other crimes, by a special grand jury yesterday.

Those who will face trial for the murder of Wilson, innocent victim of a gamblers' feud, are Albert McDermott, alias John (Slim) Dunn, now doing time at the Federal prison in Alcatraz Island, off California; William S. Cleary, Albert Sutton and Ernest Myers. The latter three are in jail in Washington.

Pugh conferred with officials of the Department of Justice today and they promised to speed extradition of McDermott.

It is believed the quartet will be brought to trial in March.

All four also were indicted for conspiring to murder Edward (Mickey) McDonald, Washington gambler.

An entire month may be necessary to bring McDermott, who was convicted of participating in the Heurich Brewery holdup here in the fall of 1933, back to the city.

Dewey Jenkins, small-time gambler and member of the decimated Tri-State gang, also was indicted for conspiring to murder McDonald.

Virginia Improves Quality of Dairies

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Virginia dairies meeting grade a requirements have increased from 22.3 per cent to 80.5 per cent since the passage of inspection laws in 1930, S. S. Smith, director of the State dairy and food division, told delegates to the twenty-second annual convention of the Virginia Dairy Products Association here today.

There has also been a marked improvement, Smith said, in sanitary conditions in the production and distribution of milk and dairy products through the enforcement of the Babcock test regulations and other laws.

Dr. Chris P. Segard, of the Wisconsin alumni research foundation, outlined the ultra-violet ray method of increasing vitamin D content of milk. The method, which Dr. Segard said was developed by the Wisconsin foundation, is now used by dairies in 170 cities.

The convention closed tonight with the election of officers.

Poor Grade Tobacco Hurts Burley Market

Abingdon, Va., Jan. 22.—Burley tobacco auctions were brought to an end yesterday in the Appalachian belt. The price average at Abingdon warehouses yesterday was the lowest of the season, 1,800,058 pounds selling for $26,914.66, an average of $14.95 per hundredweight.

During the season Abingdon warehouses sold 7,821,004 pounds for $1,630,366.79, an average of $20.85. The sharp decline in price average for the last few market days was attributed largely to the preponderance of poorer grades of tobacco on the warehouse floors. The season as a whole, however, was one of the best of recent years.

"Exceptional Circumstances."

Government officials fear that the lower courts may regard as a precedent for enjoining other tax collections the Supreme Court's ruling that impounded processing taxes shall be returned. President Roosevelt points out that the Court order has reversed a decision rendered in 1922, upholding a law passed in 1867, which barred injunction suits against the collection of Federal taxes.

In that case, a millowner brought suit to enjoin the sale of property to satisfy a tax on net profits levied under the child labor law. The lower court granted the injunction. But when the case reached the Supreme Court the chief justice declared that the millowner had not exhausted all legal remedies available to him, since he could have paid under protest and taken action to recover. Consequently, he ordered the injunction to be dismissed, although meantime the child labor act had been declared unconstitutional.

In another case, however, an injunction against collection of a Federal tax, imposed under the futures trading act of 1921, was upheld on the ground that "exceptional and extraordinary circumstances" made the statute of 1867 inapplicable. Moreover, the court order to return processing taxes collected from the rice millers did not turn specifically upon the validity of the injunction issued by the lower courts. Hence lawyers differ as to the interpretation to be placed upon the Supreme Court's action and some would deny that it is in conflict with past decisions.

In any event, present legal uncertainties are most disquieting. If the lower courts should assume that they are privileged to enjoin the collection of taxes, pending final determination of the constitutionality of laws authorizing levies of various sorts, the existing budgetary confusion will become even worse, if that be possible.

The general purpose of the law of 1867 is plain, and its value as a means of protecting the Government against litigation that might seriously hamper the collection of revenue is indubitable. However, when taxpayers are confronted by demands for payment of large sums under new kinds of regulatory laws of doubtful constitutionality, the courts may well conclude that circumstances are so "exceptional and extraordinary" as to warrant a different method of procedure from that which would ordinarily be wise.

The destruction of essential safeguards to the "orderly and uninterrupted collection of all Federal taxes" against which Solicitor General Reed protests so strongly, undoubtedly would "imperil the normal functioning of government." But such normal functioning may likewise be jeopardized if the Government is not prevented from collecting and spending vast sums which it may subsequently be ordered to return to the taxpayers.

In Mourning.

It is not only because the British Empire circles the world that the world is circled by sorrow at the passing of the British King-Emperor. Canada and the antipodes bare their heads; cymbals clash a deathnote across India; tom-toms beat a funeral march over African plains; on every one of the Seven Seas there are ships whose colors are lowered.

All this was to be expected. Expected, too, were the condolences from friendly states, the expressions of sympathy from courts and capitals wherewith the House of Windsor is connected by ties of blood or wartime co-operation. Stockholm, Oslo and Copenhagen, Paris, Tokyo and Washington. But there come other tributes to George V which are more spontaneous and far less matter-of-course in character.

The vanished Germany, at Doorn, voices what is unmistakably a sincere regret. The flags of the present Reich droop at half-staff above all her embassies. For the first time in the history of the Irish Free State, President de Valera's semiofficial newspaper publishes a portrait of a member of the British royal family—and editorially praises him. The foreign commissar of the Soviet Republic which killed the King's cousin declares that his government shares the sorrow of Great Britain. And Italy, to which all things British have recently been anathema, orders a period of mourning.

With friends and allies, old enemies and present opponents uniting in the manifestations, it is doubtful if history has ever seen a monarch whose death was the cause of more universal regret.

Prices And The AAA.

The argument that some substitute for the AAA is essential to prevent a disastrous decline in the prices of farm products is not borne out by the available evidence. The London Economist notes, for instance, that "the rise in world wholesale prices involved in the general recovery from the 1929-1932 depression got fairly into its stride during 1935." On the average, prices advanced about 7 per cent in the United States and 8 per cent in Great Britain during the past year. Even France overcame the handicap of an overvalued gold currency sufficiently to achieve a limited price rise.

The rise in prices of industrial raw materials and foodstuffs in particular has gone far toward correcting income disparities which have severely curtailed agricultural buying power and held back industrial recovery. Entirely apart from price-raising and production-control programs, various "natural" causes have been at work to improve the market for basic commodities.

Short crops due to drought have helped in some cases, but the most universal and the most potent price-raising factor has been the pronounced expansion in industrial activity which has occurred in many countries. Estimates published by the League of Nations indicate that the industrial production indexes of 13 out of 22 countries were higher last year than in 1928.

Such significant figures go a long way toward refuting contentions that the economic salvation of the American farmer is dependent upon a regime of artificial scarcity, plus Government subsidies to supplement inadequate income. The farmer is already enjoying the benefits of a world-wide improvement in business, and, with an anticipated further expansion of industrial demand, his position will doubtless become even better.

It would, of course, be a serious mistake to overrate the extent and probable permanence of the achieved recovery, or to underestimate the gravity of the problems that remain to be solved. The recent expansion of industrial activity is unquestionably due in part to the year-end war scare, which greatly stimulated the buying of certain basic raw materials. It is also undeniable that foreign trade is still at a very low level, although slight increases in value and volume were recorded in 1935. On the whole, however, recovery has been confined to production and trade for domestic markets. Moreover, it has been stimulated to some extent by large-scale governmental spending and cheap money policies that may produce new types of economic maladjustment as injurious as the depression evils which they seek to counteract.

Regardless of reasons for anxiety concerning the future, it is undeniable that many countries have benefited for the time being from a general price advance. This has been due to various causes, natural and artificial—some of a helpful character, others inimical to the public welfare. But farming populations everywhere have shared in the gains of this world-wide improvement in business.

There is no reason to suppose that agriculture will not continue to benefit in the coming months. Certainly the fundamental economic forces now at work to expand the market for farm products will not cease to operate if the AAA should pass into the oblivion to which the recent Supreme Court decision consigned it.

That Silver Policy.

Nineteen months after passage of the silver purchase act the market price of silver is actually lower than it was when the Treasury set out to raise its price to $1.29 per ounce, or alternatively to buy silver until stocks reached one-third the value of gold holdings.

Between June, 1934, and the close of 1935 the Treasury acquired 663,000,000 ounces of silver, exclusive of amounts transferred under the nationalization order and purchases of newly mined domestic silver. Despite these huge acquisitions little progress has been made toward achieving the 3-to-1 ratio, because of the rapid concurrent rise in gold stocks through importation. About 1,300,000,000 ounces of silver would have been needed to meet the requirements of the silver purchase act at time of passage. Today we are still approximately 1,000,000,000 ounces short of that goal.

The failure to accomplish the objectives of the silver legislation does not mean that the Treasury's operations have been without effect. On the contrary, they have done a maximum amount of damage without benefiting any group or class except a few speculators and subsidized domestic producers who are not affected by gyrations in the market price. Instead of increasing the prestige of silver as a monetary metal, we have made it a football of the wildest and most disastrous kind of commodity speculation based on guesses as to future Treasury buying policies.

At considerable cost, the country has increased its useless silver hoards without producing the kind of domestic inflation desired by certain silver-bloc Senators and without assisting the revival of our trade with China. Indeed, the rise in world silver prices which followed passage of the silver purchase act resulted in a precipitate decline in our exports to China. During the first 10 months of 1935 they were 43 per cent below the level of the corresponding period in 1934.

After being forced off the silver standard by our buying operations, China recently announced her intention to rely upon a managed currency. The latest drop in prices, for which we are also responsible, will only place new difficulties in China's path by reducing the value of her nationalized silver stocks and interfering with plans for tying her currency to sterling. Such, in fact, is believed to be the explanation for the Treasury's readiness to let prices fall. But it is not a reason that will endear us to the Chinese or create illusions about our philanthropic motives.

Having thoroughly discredited silver as a monetary metal, and having created a vast amount of financial dislocation in silver-using countries, it is up to the Administration to show cause as to why this pernicious legislation should not be repealed.

Laval Falls.

Premier Laval's cabinet fell yesterday largely because a general election will be held in France this spring. The present Parliament will adjourn in six or eight weeks to permit its members to campaign. The Radical-Socialist Party, most numerous in the Chamber, and keystone of Laval's cabinet, wishes to dissociate itself from his measures and present its own program to the electorate.

In this coming campaign domestic issues will play the predominant part. The Radical-Socialists are against devaluation. But the necessary taxes and economies of course are not popular. The powerful federation of government employes is clamoring against the Laval salary cuts. The public is restive under his sales taxes. There is considerable "soak the rich" and "share the wealth" sentiment in France, and more than a tinge of it among the Radical-Socialists.

This party has also strongly censured the Hoare-Laval agreement, and some of its members have criticised his measures against the Croix de Feu as vascillating. But were it not for the coming elections, Radical-Socialist dissatisfaction with Laval's policies on foreign affairs, economy or fascism would perhaps not have been strong enough to turn his government out.

Laval is a man without party—formerly a Socialist, more recently affiliated with a minute group of Independent Socialists. The Radical-Socialists number 157 out of a total of 600 deputies, and have held the six most important positions in the Laval coalition cabinet. They have decided that by giving further support to the former premier they would be held responsible by the voters for his program in entirety. Anticipating a further electoral swing to the left, by which they hope to profit, they want to free themselves of criticisms directed against Laval.

The elections are scheduled for April 26 and May 3. Deputies are anxious to get home to campaign. France, therefore, expects an interim cabinet centered around the Radical-Socialist Party, with no great difference from the last government. A Radical-Socialist coalition with the Socialists, the next strongest party, seems improbable in the present Chamber. The new premier is likely to seek support from moderates of every faction. Obviously his policy must be to make as few major decisions as possible, but to prepare for peaceful and orderly elections.

Quite possibly Laval will be retained as foreign minister. Should this happen it would indicate even more clearly that politics and not policy divide Frenchmen at this time, that the Radical-Socialists have not repudiated Laval entirely, but simply wish to face voters standing on their own feet. To understand the situation Americans must realize that the French Parliament is not divided into major political parties, but into a large number of shifting "blocs" among which the Radical-Socialists are, at the moment, dominant.

Comic Opera.

Lakme, originally intended as a romantic opera in three acts, was rewritten in Constitution Hall on Tuesday night. Lakme's prayers in the opening scene were replaced by the lamentations of Mrs. Edouard Albion, the producer's wife. She invoked not the gods Durga and Shiva, created by Brahms, but Gaul and Hayden, supported by Local No. 161. And the union rules proved quite as unrelenting as the adamant Nilakantha, the villain in the opera.

Not merely the characters and the plot were altered, but the manner of presentation. The overture, traditionally indicative of the theme to follow, was appropriately missing. Contrary to the definition of opera, as drama set to music, there was no music and all the drama was enacted offstage. As a variant on Wagnerian tradition, it was the audience and not the singers who provided the noise. But the gallery paid tribute to Wagner with an excellent imitation of the anvil chorus.

In the midst of all the din, two notes were outstandingly sour. One was the lack of foresight on the part of the producers, who should have realized that the most painstaking preparations are of no avail if one essential detail is omitted. The other was the childish recalcitrance of the musicians, who preferred to put themselves in a most unco-operative light rather than waive the rigidity of union rules.

But in spite of everything, the show must go on. Alas, alack, Lakme at last! There was a happy ending after all. And if only half the audience stayed, that half got two shows for the price of one.

Property Owner's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest the communications anent the renting and building for sale situation in Washington.

Being a property owner in a small way gives me an insight into the peculiar angle with which newcomers to Washington view this situation. I have yet to find a family on a moderate salary willing to live in a moderately priced home. For a rental of $20 to $25, they demand a house of sufficient size for a family (generally five) with all modern conveniences, perhaps an acre to five acres of ground close to the Departments.

This and other silly reasons have so hardened property owners that the constant wails about high rent fall on deaf ears.

Keeping up with the Joneses in Washington just can't be done and the sooner newcomers learn to accept the fact that they can live contentedly in something a little less grand than "back home," the better off they will be.

"Healthful Shake-Outs."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Supreme Court decisions of last May gave the country a new basis for solid recovery. Too bad for the many job hunters in NRA, but very healthful for general business and industry, which has made astonishing progress ever since. And now we have a big "healthful shake-out" of the AAA. It is very hard on the army of bureaucrats regimenting the farmers, hurts terribly the prestige of those political manipulators who killed the little pigs, plowed up the cotton, put a heavy disguised sales tax on living costs, ruined foreign markets, etc. But the consumers all have a real break in their favor. Agriculture now on sounder ground may have a substantial, healthful come-back.

Some years back the father of the present Pierpont Morgan returning from Europe gave out about the first interview he ever gave the press. He said business was retarded by too many "indigested securities." After some wide-spread and drastic liquidation, there were sounder and more solid financial and business conditions.

The immense output of New Deal laws and decrees attended by huge increase in national debt have never been properly digested by the people of this country. Like Mr. Farley's $50 per plate Jackson Day dinner, spiced with Mr. Roosevelt's remarks about "enemies in our midst," they give the country a pain. The fact of the matter is that most of the New Deal is not only undigested but indigestible. The sooner there is complete liquidation of this indigestible mess, the more certain we can be of complete economic recovery.

Great Falls Road.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I call attention to the following hazards in connection with the Great Falls road in Virginia:

The narrowness of the highway, which should be made at least 6 feet wider.

The danger of the one-way bridges on this road.

The extremely dangerous approaches of several of the intersections on the Great Falls road and more especially that of the Spring Hill road, which is not visible to the motorist going toward Great Falls until he is actually at the intersection.

Last summer the road was resurfaced, but not made any wider and when an automobile meets a bus or truck it is necessary for either one or the other to run one or two feet off the road in order to pass. It is to be hoped that the proper authorities in Virginia will do something shortly to make this road safe for travel.

A Farmer's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was amused at reading in your letter columns a letter by Mr. Royden C. Rinker under date of January 15. He asks what right has a plumber to criticize an operation or a politician to criticize an engineering project. I would like to know his qualifications for passing on the AAA.

I am a farmer and not a plumber, and know what I am talking about. My farm is within 25 miles of the Capital. In July, 1933, wheat sold at $1.02 per bushel from my farm to Gaithersburg, Md. A few months later the AAA and the NRA became law. To raise a 1934 wheat crop, I had to pay NRA prices for gasoline for my tractor. Increased prices for fertilizer and lime and everything I bought amounted to $500. To raise the 1935 wheat crop I had to pay NRA prices because I had to buy fertilizer in the fall of 1934.

Wheat sold in July, 1934, in the same town at an average of 86 cents and in July, 1935, at an average of 70 cents. In July, 1934, it sold for 16 cents a bushel less than in 1933 and in July, 1935, for 32 cents a bushel less than in 1933, before the AAA was a law. At the same time, the consumer was being robbed 30 cents a bushel by a processing tax. How was the farmer benefited by the AAA?

I wish to state that I had 80 tons of baled hay to sell in December, 1934—the drought year. I sold the same for $13.50 a ton, and before it was all hauled from my farm the brain trusters canceled duty on Canadian hay. My buyer refused to take the last 22 tons, and I had to sell for $6 per ton. I have a record of paid prices in my office, which is within 11 blocks of the Department of Agriculture.

I wish to state that in my opinion the AAA and the NRA were the biggest rackets ever to be saddled upon the American public.

The Comedy Touch.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three cheers and a tiger for Jim Farley for inventing a family tree for the divested interests that are keeping us in bondage. For Farley to sound-off about arrant demagogues the way he did in his last bawl-out speech, gave me a kick.

He's got the comedy touch, that lad, and should go far (it can't be too far). J. WINSTEAD.

Attacks on Woodrow Wilson.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has been a source of surprise to me, not to say regret, that not until such a late day has some member of the Democratic Party risen to defend the memory of Woodrow Wilson from the attacks that have been directed against it by members of the so-called Munitions Investigating Committee of the Senate. What that investigation was leading to became apparent to me some time ago, and I have been anxiously waiting to see if they who owe such a debt of gratitude to the martyred President would content themselves to let the attacks go unanswered.

I am glad to see that they have advanced to meet the defamers.

So far the full force of the counter-attack has been leveled at the chairman of the committee. A close look into the record of the investigation will disclose, however, that the chairman has not been alone in the attack. A prominent member of the dominant party has also displayed animus. Of course, Woodrow Wilson had nothing to do with the matter held against him by this particular Senator. The blame, if blame there be, for a good man and great Democrat (now long dead) not getting the Democratic nomination in 1912 cannot in all honesty be laid to Mr. Wilson, except in that he did get the nomination. The blame for that fact, if blame there be, should be laid to another good man and great Democrat, also long since dead. Peace to their ashes, both!

Participation in assaults upon a great President's character by the promising son of a most worthy sire is deplorable, to say the least, and will but little help that son to a high place in the hearts of his countrymen.

Such attacks against the character and the memory of President Wilson as has just been witnessed should in all conscience cease. But whether they do or not, be sure that the name of Woodrow Wilson will blazon the pages of history centuries after those of his detractors have been forgotten.

PRO-WILSON.

"Big Business Won."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me space to commend Senator Gerald P. Nye for his courageous efforts.

Conditions of 1914-17 face us again. We must be awake and not go on another crusade. The munition investigation carried on by Senator Nye, thus far, simmers down to the fact that before we actually participated in the world calamity it was a fight between American big business and humanity, and to our everlasting disgrace as a so-called Christian Nation, big business won. We valued the dollar more than our young manhood, and war-mongers became ravenous birds of prey, fattening and enriching themselves through the slaughter and misery of our fellow human beings. Talk Of Court Changes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your correspondents' column of January 19, Mr. Cassidy speaks in disparaging language about the "loose talk about legislation by Congress to curb the United States Supreme Court and make that body subservient to political expediency." Might it not, to use an excellent Biblical metaphor, be advisable for Mr. Cassidy to pull out the beam from his own eye before considering the mote that is in his brother's eye? In other words, Mr. Cassidy himself is guilty of a "great deal of loose talk" and does not show the familiarity with our constitutional history that he claims to have.

In the first place, he speaks as if it were the function of the Supreme Court to pass upon the constitutionality of all laws passed by Congress, which of course is not the case. Only a very small percentage of the total legislation of Congress could ever conceivably come before the Supreme Court for review. In the second place, the chief question in the Dred Scott case was not whether slaves were property but whether a free Negro could become a United States citizen and whether Dred Scott had thus become a citizen by virtue of having lived for some time in free territory, or what had up to that time been considered free territory. In the third place, it was not the fourteenth amendment which destroyed property in slaves, as Mr. Cassidy states, but the thirteenth amendment.

Finally, I should like to call to Mr. Cassidy's attention the clause in the Constitution (Art. III, Sec 2) which states: ". . . the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions, and under such regulations, as the Congress shall make." (The italics are mine.) Suppose, then, that Congress should proceed by statute to "except" certain types of cases from the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. It is not my purpose to inquire into the advisability of such action. I should simply like to ask Mr. Cassidy whether, in view of the above quotation from the Constitution itself, he still believes "it will be the solemn duty of that court to declare that such action is not the law of the land.

The Post Impressionist

An Emperor On The Air.

Post Office, Thursday.

ONE of our British friends was talking on the subject that is at the moment uppermost in most British minds:

"The Empire," said he, "respected Victoria. It admired Edward VII. But George V it loved.

"Of course," he continued, "the Empire began its formal existence in the reign of the first of those sovereigns. And, of course, it was bound closely together under the second. Nevertheless, a lot was done to tighten its mutual bonds in the reign just ended—and not only by the common cause of the World War, either. It was a tightening of what you might call spiritual bonds—by the thoroughly British process of loosening legal bonds. But it was no end aided by the affection that King George the monarch won for King George the monarch and man.

"I expect, wherever British subjects—overseas or at home—heard the London radio's announcement of the King's death the other night, their minds must have traveled back, through four weeks less one day, to the last time they heard the King's voice. I mean his broadcast on Christmas Day.

"That broadcast provided a good example of our reasons for feeling the way we did about him.

"Do you remember it?

"The whole affair was beautifully managed. The American newspapers didn't do it justice—not half.

"Think of it: It was the middle of winter in England; it was the middle of summer in some other parts of the Empire. Out on the Pacific coast of Canada, Christmas Day had barely dawned. Over in India, Christmas Day was almost ended. It had ended in the Antipodes.

"Yet all these countries belong to one great whole.

"There were thirty preliminary minutes given for the people of the Empire to realize how far they spread and then 'to get together,' as you Americans say: A taxi-driver in Piccadilly spoke to his fellow-subjects as the representative of London; a farmer, having his tea out-of-doors, spoke to his fellow-subjects as the representative of South Africa.

"All that sort of thing.

"Then, just like anybody else, King George talked to us, from his Christmas Day family-party at Sandringham.

"He didn't talk long: he never was a talker. And he didn't say anything profound: he wasn't a profound person, and didn't pretend to be.

"He made his score from another wicket.

"He spoke to his subjects as a friend to a friend. He never once used the regal 'We:' he used throughout the simple 'I.'

"Yes, 'friends'—that was the note. He began not with 'My dear people,' but 'My dear friends.' And he gave us all the feeling that he was really wanting and trying, to address every person in the Empire personally: high and low, rich and poor, men and women and children—all the British domiciled pretty well all along the course of the sun.

"He made us feel that he was one of us. He made us realize that we all had something in common. And he made us appreciate the fact that that something is something essential.

"That was the way it was with George V," our British friend concluded: "Under Victoria, we were loyal British subjects; under Edward VII, we were loyal British citizens—under George V every one of us, besides being just as loyal, was a part of the empire."

There is, or used to be, another view of the British Empire and its nominal rulers. We once said something to a famous British Socialist about the arrival of the British Socialist State spelling the end of the reign of George V:

"Oh, not a bit of it!" came the answer. "Any State of any sort has to have an official hatrack on which to hang its official clothes. You Americans have your written Constitution for the purpose. We British have our Royal Family. It hurts nobody, and, if we pulled it down, we should only have to think up and build up, some other hatrack. That would hardly be economic, would it?"

He spoke in the tenth year of the late reign. We have always suspected that his cynicism—though then general in his party—was nothing more than a poor mask for a real affection.

And what of America's sentiment? Column-reader Pryor, of Falls Church, dropped in today to ask us. He said his children greeted him at Tuesday's breakfast with the words: "The King is dead." Said he: "Everywhere over here, in common speech today, it isn't 'King George,' still less 'the King of England.' It's 'the King.' Where's the answer?"

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

He Didn't Run Out.

Sandringham, England, Jan. 22.

ONE reason why the English regarded King George as a good, game ruler, as loyal to his people as they were to him, was his consistent refusal, in the face of strong temptation and with every excuse, to run out on them when winter came.

Alfonso of Spain couldn't stay home and was always tearing off to the French Riviera to gamble his people's money and get away from it all. Albert of Belgium and Carol of Rumania couldn't find room enough on their home grounds and went slumming across their borders more or less disguised as honest haberdashers out for a little relaxation. And the Aga Khan, of India, whose income is his weight in gold delivered once a year, goes home to Bombay only to step on the scales and accept the money—which is white of him, to be sure. He spends much of it around Nice.

But although George of England had pneumonia seven years ago and almost strangled on the oily green fog of London, which contains a ton of soft coal soot to the square block, he never ran away. This was a course of conduct which was close to heroism in a man of his age and with his income and prerogatives whose throat was delicate and whose heart was weak.

Nobody knew better than the King that the English climate is a loaded gun pointed at the head of every inmate of the islands, which goes off frequently and mows the victims down in appalling numbers. Even the good winter weather is good only by comparison with the average and is by any other standard vile. Nevertheless, George spent his winters at home, and his only concession to himself was to spend occasional holidays at Sandringham-on-the-Wash, which is an inlet of the North Sea, where the air, though cold and clammy, need not be mined with a pickax, as in London.

• • • •

HIS motive for this was never stated, but the King was a naval officer in his younger days, and he probably had in mind the tradition that the skipper musn't hop into the lifeboat, leaving his crew to handle the ship. It cannot be that he liked the English climate in winter, for patriotic prejudice can go just so far, and "horrible" is an adjective which can apply to the weather only on perfect days.

He couldn't close up the country and evacuate the total poulation from November to May, so the old gentleman gallantly stuck around himself to help his people suffer and snuffle and ache.

At Sandringham his existence was slightly less awful than in London, for he liked to shoot birds, and it is unavoilable to shoot birds on his miles of cover around about. In fact, anybody who doesn't shoot birds under these conditions ought to get a cigar.

They made an honest distinction between shooting and hunting on the King's preserve, for here the birds waited like clay pipes in a shooting gallery, thousands of pheasant, partridge and woodcock rising when the beaters came along to boost them over the weeds and falling when the King came a-bang. With beaters before him to raise the fowl and loafers behind him to load and carry his guns the English squire could hardly have exerted himself less if he were to telephone down to the store for his game.

Birds stroll through the open fields today as tame as chickens in a barnyard pecking the light snow and never even raising their heads at the traffic along the roads. At night the automobile lights lure out hundreds of hares and rabbits of suicidal bent, which try to end it all beneath the wheels and in many cases do.

• • • •

A COUPLE of miles from Sandringham House is the almshouse, a pretty little cottage, the home of a dozen old women who wear tall conical witches' hats and red mother hubbards to distinguish them from old women who are not receiving alms. Mary Queen is very kind to her neighbors, the old ladies in the almshouse, and they are undoubtedly the happiest and most fortunate paupers in the land, their witches' hats the envy of other old women in other almshouses.

The King was a good business asset for Kings Lynn, drawing much trade to the town on various occasions, but the Prince of Wales apparently does not care much either for shooting or for Sandringham. He came here no oftener than he had to, and now that he is King, with no filial calls to make, he probably will not come at all. Rapidan, Va.; Oyster Bay and Asbury Park have had similar experiences in the sunshine of distinguished patronage followed by a cold eclipse.

They have made some cautious moves toward air-conditioning in some of the modern buildings in London, where sometimes the fog seems to sift through the very panes of the windows, but Sandringham has not been modernized to that extent. The King was taking no special advantages over those subjects of his who also were susceptible to throat infections and whose hearts were oppressed by the lack of oxygen in the air. But that would have done little good, anyway. A man can't stay in a room all his life, and you can't air-condition the whole outdoors.

Isolated Japan

Withdrawal From London Conference Means Tokyo Must Choose Between An Alliance, A Retreat From Asia Or Restricted Naval Program.

By Livingston Hartley.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE inflexible Japanese insistence on a "common upper limit," the right to a fleet as large as the American or the British, at the London Naval Conference may be traced to two motives. The first of these was a desire for greater relative naval strength which would render the strategical position of Japan in the western Pacific even stronger than it is today. No one can blame the Japanese government for seeking to gain this objective, which might prove essential to the ultimate success of its larger aims in China.

The second motive was national prestige which, it was claimed, suffered from the inferior naval ratio accepted by Japan at the Washington Conference. There is reason to believe that this motive was a synthetic one, artificially created by the military and naval leaders of Japan as a means of exerting pressure on the Western sea powers. Once National prestige was involved, it required an unyielding stand on a question affecting other nations which must either succeed or fail. It failed, and Japan withdrew from the naval conference at London.

The adoption of an inflexible stand by a great nation provides it with a powerful diplomatic weapon. Other nations will think twice before they turn down a "take it or leave it" proposition from a great power. By following such a course, the great power may get what it wants. If, however, its fixed policy is rejected, it has no room to maneuver and must face the consequences.

• • • •

THERE is an analogy between the Japanese attitude at the London conference and the Italian attitude at Geneva in September. Both powers adopted inflexible policies on important international questions which the other nations could only reject at the risk of serious consequences to themselves. The intransigeant policies of both powers were, however, rejected. Italy, as a result, is now politically isolated and confronted with united opposition to her African war. Japan has now isolated herself on the naval question and may face common opposition to her naval expansion in the future.

Two factors accentuate the situation that has arisen between Japan and the principal sea powers. Japanese expansion in the Far East is threatening the national interests of these powers in China, leading them to draw together for the protection of these interests. And the London conference is continuing on a four-power basis, causing its participants to seek a solution of the naval problem which will meet any future Japanese building menace.

Whatever the final agreement that emerges from the London Naval Conference, whether it provides for some form of limitation or only advance information on building programs, it must make provision for future additions to the Japanese navy. It must contain an "escalator clause" or other loophole allowing the American and other navies to meet any sudden increase in Japanese naval construction.

• • • •

THE conference may be expected to continue the relationship between the British and American navies on a mutually satisfactory basis. Each fleet, however, will be subjected to the potential threat of Japanese naval expansion. In these circumstances, we may expect the British and American Governments to work together to meet the problem created by the Japanese rejection of any type of naval limitation. The influence of such action on the protection of their similar interests in the Far East may ultimately prove far reaching.

Less than a year from now the Washington Treaty will expire. The United States and the British Empire will then be free to build up modern naval bases in the Far East which they renounced in that treaty. The creation of a strong naval base at Hongkong could not but influence greatly the extension of Japanese control into southern China and even in the Yangtze Valley. In the same way, with the steadily growing power of the airplane in warfare, the development of a strong American base in the Aleutian Islands would modify considerably the existing strategic relationship between the United States and Japan in the Pacific.

We in the United States have practiced the policy of "isolation" and have not found it dangerous. It is not dangerous to us under present conditions for two reasons. In the first place, we are neither expansionist nor imperialist in our relations with other countries, and none of our active foreign policies threaten directly the national interests of other important powers. There is no reason today, therefore, why any group of powers should "gang up" on us to protect any mutual interests.

In the second place, our national defensive power which includes our Navy, air strength, industrial power, resources and strategic position, is the greatest in the world. In the next few years, at any rate, even if our isolation policy should allow the development of conditions abroad that involve us again in war, we shall not find that political isolation is dangerous to our national security.

JAPAN has also now withdrawn into political isolation by refusing to act with other sea powers in solving the naval problem. Japan, however, is already threatening actively the national interests of several world powers. Her expansion into China menaces directly American and British economic interests in the Far East, and implies a potential menace to the future welfare of the Anglo-Saxon peoples on the Pacific. It creates at the same time, bitter hostility among 400,000,000 Chinese, which might become a dangerous factor if Japan should become involved in a war with a powerful enemy. Japanese expansion constitutes, moreover, a direct threat against Russia, which is trying to meet it by building up a gigantic army and air force for the protection of East Siberia.

It seems reasonable to expect that the political isolation of Japan under such conditions is too dangerous to endure. It might be terminated by an alliance with Germany against Russia, which would eliminate much of the danger to the future of Japan that Russian opposition to Japanese policies now implies. Germany, however, by such an alliance would only solve one of her problems, and might cause irreparable damage to her relations with Western Europe. An alliance between Nazi Germany and imperialist Japan might even influence markedly the foreign policy of the United States.

If Japan desires to mitigate the dangers of her present position by other means, two paths are open to her. She may either modify her policy of Asiatic expansion, or refrain from a program of naval construction which would create an additional cause of friction with the United States and the British Empire.

• • • •

THE statements of her delegates at London suggest that Japan may decide to follow this second path. She has satisfied the demand for national prestige by withdrawing from the London conference rather than discuss an inferior ratio. She may try to consolidate a position of "peace with honor" by abstaining from a building policy which would further antagonize the other naval powers.

Our own position is far more simple, namely, to maintain our present naval superiority over Japan whatever she builds, and to continue our policy of naval understanding and parity with Great Britain. We could, as a "good neighbor," take one step which would relieve in part the friction in the Pacific which Japan's withdrawal from London is liable to create. We could cease to exclude immigrants from Japan on the grounds of race and treat them like other foreigners, on a quota basis which would amount in their case to less than 200 a year. Such action on our part would cost us practically nothing, but would constitute a politically important gesture to Oriental psychology and Japanese national prestige.

Notebooks Are Out

by Karl Schriftgiesser

A Reporter Reports.

EVERY so often it occurs to me that perhaps I should carry a notebook in which, as they say, to jot down the inconsequentialities of my rather useless life. Lots of famous people have carried notebooks. Arnold Bennett, Robert Louis Stevenson, Starr Faithfull are three of whom I can think right off the bat. Mr. Bennett made a very fine book out of his; Stevenson got at least one good essay, and Starr Faithfull caused a number of people several uneasy nights after her untimely death because of her insistence upon recording certain happenings. I have no ambition to write a book or to annoy anyone, either now or after I am gone; but it might come in handy on the day after the day off. So I tried it for a week with the following results:

As nearly as I can make out from my own penmanship, the most profound thought I had on the first day was this, which I find written down with all the finality of great discovery: "People look like cities." I put that great thought down one afternoon when I had slipped into the Willard bar for a quick one. While I was sitting there a very dignified gentleman also came in. If not clean favored he was, like Richard Corey in the poem, imperially slim and all the people in the barroom looked at him.

He had a manner when he walked, slowly, as if accustomed to being stared at. He was gray at the temples and he had a neat mustache and goatee. His every movement was deliberate: the way he sipped his Martini, the way he lighted his cigarette. He sort of savored everything in a leisurely and gracious way. He had a large black hat and a flowing overcoat. Probably it was the goatee, but when I looked at him I at once thought he was exactly my idea of what a gentleman from Louisville, Ky., would look like. A true Southern gentleman. So I asked Paul if he knew him and he said, yes, he did—he was a jewelry salesman from Attleboro, Mass. So I had to cross out my first profundity. It was pretty discouraging, this trying to be an Arnold Bennett.

• • • •

BUT one cannot give up after one note, or even after one Manhattan. So I had the second Manhattan and went off to meet a very good friend of mine who also happens to be a famous author. From his lips, I said to myself, will come some profound sayings that will make this notebook of mine famous and something for posterity to read. I could already see learned research workers of some future generation deciphering its crabbed handwriting in their effort to learn more about the great mind of my brilliant friend.

How was I to know that half of the time we were together we were to talk about hunting dogs, and the other half about the respective intelligences of our respective daughters?

There wasn't an epigram in the entire conversation and not a line for the book.

THAT settled it. After all, I said to myself, you're not supposed to be a philosopher. You're a reporter. So I decided to stick to accumulating facts, remembering that names are news. Here are some of the jottings that I think may be of interest:

Eddie Gilmore, the Associated Press reporter, is running hard for the presidency of the Washington Newspaper Guild . . . In the course of a half hour's observation I saw three persons stop to buy a copy of the Daily Worker from the newsboy at the corner of Fourteenth and F streets. All three seemed to be well-fed business men . . . John Ihlder, the alley eliminator, has given up his work as a consultant in Boston and is devoting his full time to his Washington work . . . More people called the office of this newspaper on Monday to find out if the Supreme Court had doomed the TVA, than called up to find out about the AAA two weeks ago . . .

"Scholastic," the magazine that Mr. Sullivan says is "too red" for the school children, is owned by a former Republican newspaper publisher of Pittsburgh and by a retired capitalist who made his wealth out of aluminum, just like Andrew Mellon. He also is a Republican . . . If you are a friend of Admiral Carey T. Grayson, ask him to tell you that story about King George and the shirt tails. It's even better than the one about Jesse Jones removing his shoes at Westminster Palace . . .

The storm delayed Scott Nearing for his address at Typographical Temple Sunday night, giving Senator Smith Brookhart 45 unexpected minutes to address the 600 persons who turned out to hear the speaker . . . They say Nearing's talk was one of the most brilliant given here in months, but it didn't make any of the papers . . . Ogden Mills was speaking at Town Hall the same evening . . . They tell me that the late Ted Wallen could get more news over the telephone than any other correspondent in Washington; that on a dull day he would glue himself to the telephone for an hour with results that made others in his office, who had walked their legs off, look pretty lazy . . .

Giant Low Cost House Program Being Rushed

Plans Call for Permanent Directing Agency, With Federal Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Plans for a gigantic low-cost housing program were almost ready yesterday for presentation to President Roosevelt by officials who have been quietly drafting them for him.

They call for a permanent governmental agency to direct the program over a long period of years in conjunction with States and municipalities.

Federal funds would be offered, perhaps 45 per cent of the cost, to encourage local governments to inaugurate slum clearance and housing projects. How much money the Treasury will put up remains, of course, to be determined by the President and Congress. But some of the planners visualize appropriations of $300,000,000 or $400,000,000 annually, to be more than doubled by local funds.

The proposals, it is said, aim to encourage private construction, perhaps through more liberal Federal insurance of loans for new residential building and modernization.

Although based upon the experience gained in the current low-cost housing program, the long-range plan contemplates three sharp contrasts in policy:

Local governments would inaugurate and carry out the projects.

A means test would be applied to renters so the low-cost housing would be available only for those of the lowest income class.

Federal financial aid would be frankly a subsidy so rentals could be low enough to reach families in slum areas.

Placing the program in the hands of local governments would have two advantages, authors of the plan say. Local authorities would be better able to determine the needs of their communities, and legal obstacles which have confronted such Federal activities would be avoided.

The group which will soon report to President Roosevelt includes Secretary Ickes and his housing director, A. R. Clas; Peter Grimm, assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, and Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, author of much social legislation.

Gulf Awards Contract For Two New Tankers

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—Mayor Howard W. Jackson announced today the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. had been awarded a contract for the construction of two oil tankers for the Gulf Refining Co.

The mayor said the work would involve the outlay of $2,400,000 in wages and would provide employment for 1,700 men. The tankers will be 425 feet long, have a tonnage of 11,000 dead weight tons and a capacity of 80,000 barrels of oil. The vessels will be built at the Sparrows Point (Md.) yards of the shipbuilding company.

Bonus Bill Taken to White House

Bonus Bill Enacted

just as bad, so make the message just as good."

Meanwhile, the executive committee of the economists' national committee on monetary policy issued a warning, labeled: "The bonus—an invitation to inflation."

"We conclude," the committee said, "that under existing conditions there is no method by which the Government can pay in advance of maturity the soldiers' bonus without resorting to serious inflationary measures, and we strongly oppose any such pre-payment."

Inflationary implications of the bonus were injected into the unruly House debate by Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, and by Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

"What is the difference between paying the bonus in bonds, or printing greenbacks to pay it?" Snell asked of Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, a leader of House bonus forces.

Vinson said he thought it was Republican philosophy that bond issues were not inflationary. Snell pressed his point, but Vinson did not answer.

Rich added a more dramatic touch by waving a $10 bill and a post-war German mark in the air, and asserting that one soon will be worth as much as the other.

"Do you know what you are doing?" he shouted, to the accompaniment of boos and catcalls from the veterans' bloc.

"You are piling up a national deficit which sometime you must repudiate. Think of your country, not of yourselves."

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, in charge of debate, reserved the last three minutes for himself. Doughton conceded these were "hard times" for the Government to meet its obligations.

"But it is much harder on the veterans in distress to do without payment, than it would be on the Government to pay them," he said.

Doughton drew some smiles from colleagues when he said the Senate bill was satisfactory to the veterans "and if it is satisfactory to them, in my judgment it is also fair to the Government."

The Senate bill was called up in the House at 12:09 p. m., when no one objected to Doughton's unanimous consent request that the bill be debated for an hour and then voted upon. By 1:52, Speaker Byrns was attaching his signature. Vice President Garner signed at 3:03 p. m., and at 3:47 Chairman Claude V. Parsons of the House Committee on Enrolled Bills was at the White House doorstep with the measure tucked under his arm.

Provisions of Measure.

The bill provides for issuance by the Treasury of $1,838,213,950 in non-negotiable 50 bonds, which would be handed over to the veterans along with $87,786,050 in odd cash amounts in return for their adjusted service certificates.

The bonds will be dated June 15, 1936, and a veteran receiving them can immediately cash these at the nearest postoffice for full face value. If he holds on to his bonds until June 15, 1937, he will draw 3 per cent interest from then on, until maturity is reached in 1945. Unpaid interest accruing to the Government on bonus loans to veterans would be canceled subsequent to September 30, 1931, but veterans who already have paid the interest would not get it back.

Warnings by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Budget Director Daniel Bell that the public debt will move up to $35,000,000,000 at least in the next year, and the Government in that time must float $11,300,000,000 in bonds, failed to deter either house in the rush to passage.

Approval Is Anti-Climax.

House approval came as an anti-climax to less than two weeks of bonus consideration, during which passage by both houses was taken for granted. Previous to yesterday's vote on the Senate bond substitute, the House had approved a cash-payment measure of its own by a 356-to-59 vote. Interest had waned yesterday to the point that only subdued applause greeted the Speaker's announcement of final passage. Representatives of most of the powerful veterans' groups had left the gallery before the announcement.

Representative Jed Johnson (Democrat), Oklahoma, lamented the fact that House rules would not permit him to offer the Patman plan for paying the bonus in $2,200,000,000 of greenbacks. Patman had agreed not to press his plan until the question of actually appropriating the bonus money is broached.

Four Signatures Needed.

But as soon as the bond-payment bill had cleared the House, the inflation issue flared in earnest from the long-dormant Frazier-Lemke quarter. When the House adjourned, the $3,000,000,000 inflationary farm mortgage refinancing petition lacked only four signatures of sufficient strength to force it to a vote. Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, claimed the needed signatures will be forthcoming in the next few days.

It was not the first time, however, that the petition had reached a striking point only to be whittled down by Administration leaders who persuaded members to withdraw their signatures. Altogether, some 18 names have been so removed, and the process is becoming more difficult.

The four members who signed the petition yesterday were Representative Edward T. Taylor, of Colorado, former acting majority floor leader; Representative C. Elmer Dietrich (Democrat), Pennsylvania; Representative William L. Higgins (Republican), Connecticut, and Representative Charles Kramer (Democrat), California, Lemke said.

The Frazier-Lemke bill would refinance farm indebtedness at a 1½ per cent interest rate, and a further payment of 1½ per cent annually to amortize the loan. Funds would be provided by issuance of farm-loan bonds by the Farm Credit Administration. If the bonds are not readily purchased, the Federal Reserve Board would take them and issue against them Federal Reserve notes up to $3,000,000,000.

G. O. P. Primes Heavy Artillery For Campaign

New Dealers Charged With 'Flippant Indifference' to Constitution.

By the Associated Press.

Leading toward a week-end that may prove a campaign landmark, the Republican organization hammered the New Deal last night on the scores of "flippant indifference" to the Constitution, and "broken promises."

Democratic leaders let it pass for the time at least. They were looking ahead with more apparent concern to imminent attacks on Roosevelt policies by the 1924 and 1928 party nominees for the Presidency, John W. Davis and Alfred E. Smith.

Legislative routine occupied the Democrats outwardly at the Capitol. But questions raised increasingly in private conversations were "How far will Davis and Smith go?" and with what effect on party solidarity?

"Hot" Speeches Promised.

Davis will address a legal gathering in New York tomorrow night, on the eve of Smith's speech here to the American Liberty League. Both participated in organizing the league and have stood by its insistent complaints against the Administration.

The only information obtainable about their speeches so far has been that both will be "hot."

Sources familiar with Smith's ways of doing things put little stock in suggestions that he might promote a third party movement. Neither, however, do they expect him to remain "regular."

Farley Names Self.

Chairman Farley named himself yesterday as chairman of the committee on arrangements for the national convention at Philadelphia, starting June 23.

Others of the committee are W. Forbes Morgan, New Hampshire, secretary; Col. Edwin A. Halsey, Virginia, sergeant at arms, and the following national committeemen:

Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, California; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, District of Columbia; Patrick A. Nash, Illinois; Mrs. Sam Connor, Kentucky; Mrs. Agnes Collins Dunn, New Hampshire; Frank Hague, New Jersey; Scott Ferris, Oklahoma; Walter M. Pierce, Oregon; Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Pennsylvania; William W. Howes, South Dakota; Senator Kenneth McKellar, Tennessee, and Charles E. Broughton, Wisconsin.

The threat by Dr. F. E. Townsend to attempt an independent party on behalf of his $200-a-month old-age pension plan was removed by him today. Assailing the old parties, he said the Townsend clubs instead would "dedicate themselves to the task of taking absolute charge of both."

Legal Obstacles in Way.

The decision was reached "particularly in view of the fact that it would be impossible for such a new party to get its ticket on the ballot in many of the States."

The latest Republican blows at the Administration accorded largely with positions the Liberty League has taken.

James M. Beck, former Solicitor General and member of the league's advisory council, said not only have the President's policies been in "ignorant or deliberate" violation of the Constitution, but his "attitude toward the great compact has been one of cynical and indeed flippant indifference."

In a broadcast under national committee auspices, he said the President had sought to suggest a parallel between the New Deal and the Administration of Andrew Jackson. He went on:

"Between our smiling, cultivated and Chesterfieldian President with his aristocratic Harvard College traditions, now wandering like little Alice in a wonderland of socialistic policies, and the dour, grim-visaged and unlettered backwoodsman from Tennessee, whose only concern was with the grim realities of life, there would seem to be no resemblance visible to the naked eye."

Pamphlet Issued.

The Republican Congressional committee, headed by Representative Bolton, of Ohio, circulated a pamphlet saying the New Deal path "is strewn with the wreckage of platform pledges and the candidate's promises."

Excerpts from Roosevelt campaign speeches in 1932 were printed, followed in each instance by the statement that developments contradicted the assertion.

Meanwhile, controversy over the broadcasting of Gov. Eugene Talmadge's address to a conference of anti-New Deal "Jeffersonian Democrats" at Macon, Ga., next Wednesday, was at least partially ended when officials of the Columbia Co. agreed to broadcast Talmadge's speech without charge over a Nation-wide hookup.

Involved in the controversy was an attempt by Morris A. Bealle, publisher of Plain Talk, to make arrangements for Talmadge's speech to be "piped" to Mexico by telephone broadcast from Macon. The Georgia Governor previously had failed to get radio time on United States networks.

Columbia Broadcasting Co. officials explained no company policy in connection with political broadcasts was being violated because the time was given free. The broadcast will be on January 29 from 1:15 to 1:45 p. m.

Georgia Group Named.

A committee of 28 prominent Georgians was vested yesterday with the responsibility of nominating a manager for the Roosevelt campaign in their State, where fiery Gov. Talmadge is battling against the President.

The committee was set up by the Georgia congressional delegation.

A. B. Lovett, of Savannah, was designated temporary chairman.

Ramspeck transmitted the names to National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley, with the request the committee be called together immediately. Representative Carl Vinson, of Milledgeville, said Macon probably would be the meeting place.

Hearings to Resume On PEPCO Return

Hearings will be resumed today before the Public Utilities Commission on the proposal to slash the 7 per cent rate of return allowed the Potomac Electric Power Co. under the present sliding scale.

Reduction of 1 per cent in the rate of return has been urged by People's Counsel William A. Roberts and William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Should the commission decide to cut the rate to 6 per cent, it will mean a saving of $350,000 for District power consumers. Excess profits of the company during 1935 already have assured a saving of $84,500 in 1936 bills for consumers.

Police Offer Transfusion To Save Life of Bailiff

A call was sent out yesterday to members of the police force for someone to volunteer blood to Richard Hughes, 68, a Police Court bailiff for more than 30 years, who is seriously ill at his home, 3715 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Hughes has been confined to his bed with gangrene for the past two months. Several policemen responded to the call sent out by Inspector L. I. H. Edwards. Tests were made but no transfusion was given.

First Bill Vetoed.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday submitted his first veto of a bill to this session of Congress.

He declined to sign a measure conferring upon the Court of Claims jurisdiction over claims of the Eberhart Steel Products Co., Inc., of Buffalo, N. Y., growing out of Army contracts. He said the legislation waived "certain substantive defenses that the Government may have."

The Once Over

Tropical Racing.

Miami, Fla.—Hialeah is open. The entrance of the Rue des Widener has lost some of its royal palms, and the tufted tops are suffering from hurricane dandruff, but it is still a thing of beauty and a joy forever, or up to the point of losing your fifth bet.

• • • •

After the unpretentiousness and "just folksy" atmosphere of Tropical Park it is like stepping from the county fair to the Royal Durbar. Even the customers who had been at Tropical all winter bought a new hat and began going in for sartorial effects.

• • • •

The horses looked a little more aloof and your correspondent thought the tearing up of two-dollar mutuel tickets was conducted with a little more swank.

• • • •

No matter what the big wind did to the shrubbery, it failed to stunt the pink flamingos. The birds that look like a corkscrew and walk like a piece of unraveled hose have multiplied very rapidly. There are so many of these long-throated swans here this winter that you can get pinkeye looking at them.

• • • •

Hialeah has the atmosphere of a botanical garden, the glamour of a society lawn fete, the charm of a beauty pageant, and the color of a bird show. It is one of two or three race tracks in the world where the horses seem incidental.

• • • •

If we could stop listening to people tell us about horses and start listening to somebody tell us about the birds and bees and flowers everything would be jake.

• • • •

After Tropical, it is a strain on the imagination. At Tropical it was a strain on the ears. Here the loud speaker is scorned as distinctly middle-class.

• • • •

Personally, we like the loud speaker. It is a comfort to start tearing up a ticket at the first furlong pole without being kept on edge until the finish.

• • • •

Hialeah is roomy in the grand manner. One of its chief advantages is that you can walk for miles and never meet the same tip twice.

• • • •

And is there dignity and tone? Why, there was a scandal on opening day, my lads, when a customer strayed into the clubhouse with a "hot dog." A "hot dog" in the clubhouse at Hialeah can get you ruled off the turf.

• • • •

If you are an addict, you buy it under the grandstand, smuggle it into the clubhouse in a box marked "flowers" and bribe the restaurant waiter to serve it in a chafing dish smothered with broccoli.

• • • •

Which is as it should be. Fancy a fellow who could be in this atmosphere of splendor, of tropical beauty, of gorgeous flamingos and think of a frankfurter and roll!

• • • •

Not me! When I go to Hialeah I bring an egg sandwich!

As Elmer Twitchell understands it, Congress aims to pay the bonus out of what the country hasn't got so the soldiers will have what they can't get unless the Treasury digs up some money it can't possibly have.

The attitude of a lot of Americans is one of dread that they will be thrown out of unemployment.

Cabinet Wives Entertain Large Companies at Tea

Mrs. Swanson and Mrs. Wallace Hold Their First "At Homes" With Many Members of Official Society Assisting Them.

By Winnifred Willey.

Observing little of the formality of official affairs, so many of which have been canceled because of the death of King George V of England, but reflecting the graciousness of their hostesses were the informal receptions given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who observed the first of their "at homes."

Mrs. Swanson, wearing an afternoon frock of black with a jacket of gold and bronze lame, which was fastened with frogs of the same material, was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of President Wilson; Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wife of Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island. The latter three were gowned in black.

Assisting in the general entertaining in tht drawing room were Mrs. Louis Owsley, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Loren Johnson, Mrs. Frank Upham, Mrs. Cary Travers Grayson, Mrs. Albert Niblach, Mrs. Mark Bristol and Mrs. Ruby Gordon.

The home of Secretary and Mrs. Swanson, on R street, is a handsome residence with its graceful stairway and its many exquisite paintings. Low bowls of early spring flowers were placed about the rooms and decorated the tea table, which was lighted by tall princess tapers in silver candelabra.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, Miss Janet Richards, Mrs. Hare Lippincott, Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann and Mrs. Hiram Johnson. Mrs. Dern was in black, a suit with a blouse of black and silver brocade and a smart black hat. Accompanying Mrs. Dern was her daughter, Mrs. Harry Baxter, who returned on Sunday from New York, where she had gone last week with her sister, Miss Betsy Dern, for a few days of shopping. Mrs. Baxter wore a swagger coat of black and a shallow hat with pointed mandarin peak. Mrs. Hiram Johnson wore a suit of black wool with bandings of black baby lamb. Her small hat was trimmed with the same fur. Mrs. Alvin Hert chose a tunic of jade green with black accessories.

Mrs. Wallace received her guests at her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. She was assisted only by a few close friends. Centered with pink roses and sprays of white freesia, the tea table was lighted by tall white tapers.

Mrs. Wallace, lovely in a gown of crushed raspberry crepe fashioned with draped shoulder scarf of the same material, received her guests in the drawing room, which was decorated with low bowls of roses, pale pink carnations and yellow freesias.

Among the members of society who were seen at the receptions during the afternoon were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who wore a gown of garnet velvet under a handsome coat of black with a small black hat; Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, who wore a cape of black sealskin and a small cloche of black and silver; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, wearing a small round turban and a coat of mink; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, in a gown of black velvet with a small velvet hat.

Also present were Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the Germany Embassy, whose severe black frock was in compliment to her pale hair; and Mrs. Joanna Kulikowski-Higersberger, the attractive sister of Mr. Edward Kulikowski, Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy; Mrs. Rexford G. Tugwell, who wore a smart frock of black with narrow pipings of silver, and Mrs. Herbert Feis.

Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom, of New York, and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, also were present, Mrs. Bloom wearing a gown of black and a small turban of black with a cascade of cocque feathers, and her daughter frocked in brown.

Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin, who wore a long tunic of rough white silk and a tam-o'-shanter of black velvet, a delightful contrast against her coppery hair, had with her Mrs. Samuel Rinaker, of Lake Forrest, Ill., who has been popular during her stay with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Elting.

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis, was also among those calling yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Sidney Cloman was present, wearing a gown of black with a small hat of black, at the top of which was a deep pink camelia. Mrs. Macy Marwick wore a gown of soft black satin. Among other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Bradish Carroll, jr., Mrs. Golden W. Bell and Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery.

Miss Mickler Becomes Bride Of Mr. Martin

Ceremony Is Performed in Chevy Chase by the Rev. J. G. Smyth.

The marriage of Miss Hortense Anita Mickler, daughter of the late Judge and Mrs. Albert H. Mickler, of St. Augustine, Fla., to Mr. Norman Martin, son of Mr. Julius C. Martin, special assistant to the Attorney General, and Mrs. Martin, took place yesterday at noon at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Brown, in Chevy Chase. The Rev. James Gibbons Smyth, pastor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, performed the ceremony. White roses and ferns and tall cathedral candles decorated the drawing room, and the fireplace was banked with palms and ferns.

Large Audience at Leiter Home Hears Frances Nash's Musicale

Concert Given for Benefit of Georgetown Visitation Convent Alumnae Association; Compositions by Chopin on Program; Tea Follows.

More than 150 members of Washington society gathered at the residence of Mrs. Joseph Leiter yesterday afternoon for the musicale given by Frances Nash, in private life Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, wife of Col. Watson, military aid to the President. The concert will benefit the Georgetown Visitation Convent Alumnae Association, of which Mrs. Leiter is president.

Most Washingtonians know the brilliant work of Miss Nash, both from private performances and from her appearances with the National Symphony Orchestra. She studied in Berlin, Paris, Brussels and Venice and has appeared with the symphony orchestras of Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia.

The program she played yesterday in the white and gold music room of Mrs. Leiter's residence included several Chopin compositions and delighted her large audience. Mrs. Watson, who is almost as famous for her chic as for her ability as a musician, was dressed in a low-cut gown of green velvet, embroidered in gold.

After the music, guests gathered in the dining room, where a table was set for tea. Among those glimpsed were Mrs. Charles Evans hughes, Mrs. Owen Roberts, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Frank Andrews, Mrs. Kenna Elkins, Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant, Miss Elizabeth Connoly, Mrs. Kent Legare, Mrs. James F. Mitchell, Mrs. Sherman Miles and Mrs. Laurence Groner.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Reed were there, the latter wearing a smart brown frock and hat with a mink coat. Mrs. Clarence Hewes was glimpsed deep in conversation with Mr. Jouett Shouse about plans for the Liberty League dinner to be held Saturday evening. Mrs. C. Matthews Dick was present, wearing a black satin dress and black hat. Mrs. Lee Warren was there with her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Blair, of New York. Also present were Mr. Anthony de Balasy, councilor of the Hungarian Legation; Mrs. David Porter, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Miss Lee Washington and Mrs. Huston Rawls, of New York, sister of Mrs. Leiter, who is her house guest.

Joint Program To Honor Alart

Music, Dance and Drama Groups to Unite in School Memorial.

The program of music, dance and drama to be given next Tuesday night in Central High School auditorium, under the auspices of Central Community Center, will feature the Community Center Civic Symphony Orchestra, the Columbia Players, the Schubert Singers and the Lisa Gardiner Dancers. It is attracting both artistic and sympathetic interest as a performance in tribute to the memory of Mr. Bailey F. Alart, who organized and directed the Civic Symphony Orchestra of almost 100 Washington musicians "who play for the love of playing."

In compliment to the four popular groups presenting this tribute, members of the Alice Louise Hunter Studio have volunteered as ushers. They include Misses Marjorie McGann, Eileen Jordan, Helen Richardson, Marcella Richardson, Marie Robinette and Shirley Rowe.

Well known patrons of music in the Capital, who are members of the committee sponsoring the Civic Symphony Orchestra, will attend the concert. Proceeds will go toward purchasing the music library which Mr. Alart had loaned to the orchestra, and without which it is impossible for that group to continue.

Hard of Hearing League To Be Card Party Host

The committee in charge of the card party to be given at the Kennedy-Warren Saturday evening by the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing, includes Miss Minnie M. Hill, chairman; Mrs. Laura Stovel, Miss Rosalie Kaminsky and Miss Nora D. Hill.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, is called by Robert Roseveare, headmaster of Oakington School, to look into the mysterious death of Robert Marshall, younger brother of Wilbraham, head-prefect, and cousin of Mr. Ellington, his housemaster. Robert's skull had been pierced by a gas light fixture that had fallen on him in bed. Roseveare found a note written by the boy the night before, leaving his belongings "if anything should happen" to Wilbraham. Revell talks with Daggat, garrulous school padre; Lambourne, one of the masters, and Ellington and his young wife, but finds no solution. He revisits the school when Wilbraham is found dead, apparently having dived into the empty swimming pool in the dark. Suspicion points to Ellington, who inherits 100,000 pounds from the boy.

CHAPTER X.

IT WAS SURELY the most remarkable speech day Oakington could ever have experienced. Revell, as a slightly quizzical spectator, watched the curious scene from hour to hour. He saw the reception at the main entrance in the morning—saw Dr. Roseveare, with a mechanical smile and a few mechanical words of welcome, shaking hands mechanically with each one of several hundred guests; he attended the chapel service and listened to an appallingly dull sermon by an old Oakington whom years and ambitious mediocrity had combined to make a colonial bishop; he sat in one of the rearmost rows in the hall during the afternoon and heard the lugubrious chanting of the school song.

In place of the swimming display there was a rapidly improvised concert of appalling badness. Then came a garden party tea on the quadrangle. By 7 at night almost the last of the visitors had departed. Many of the boys whose homes were within moderate distance had gone back with their parents for the traditional week-end holiday; the school servants were busily clearing away the tea party litter from the quadrangle, and the whole school, after the turmoil, seemed lonely and forlorn.

Revell, from sympathy with the head after the strain of such a day, would not have mentioned the Marshall affair on his own account. He could hardly avoid doing so, however, when Roseveare calmly asked him what train he intended catching the next day. The question was put so artlessly and with such apparent casualness that Revell was for the moment taken aback.

After a thoughtful pause he said: "If you don't mind, I should rather like to stay on a few days longer."

Roseveare nodded with complete geniality. "You're a conscientious fellow, Revell, and deserve a far better fate than to be probing a mystery that isn't, I'm afraid, much of a mystery at all. I know the place is full of rumors, but most of them contradict each other and in any case, the theories of a generation reared on crook dramas and detective novels are hardly worth taking seriously. I do not, of course, expect that even the inquest tomorrow will stop these unpleasant fictionmongers. They will just go on till they are tired, and we shall have to put up with it."

Watch May Be Clue.

Revell was silent and the other continued: "I hope you are not forgetting the boy's wrist watch which was found on the top diving platform. That, more perhaps than anything else, seems convincing evidence of what happened."

"Possibly, though I don't see why he shouldn't have left it down below, with his dressing gown and slippers."

"He may have forgotten it until the last minute. It was radium pointed, so that in the dark its illumination may have attracted his attention just as he was on the point of diving. Would you like to see the watch, by the way? It will be one of the exhibits shown to the jury tomorrow."

"Oh no, don't bother—I don't think it would help me much."

As he exclaimed rather peevishly to Lambourne an hour or so later: "What the hell was the use of looking at the damned watch after it had been mauled about by Wilson and Roseveare himself and God knows who else? Besides, I'm not a finger-print expert, even if the murderer's paw marks were plastered all over it!"

"Yet you have, I suppose, a theory of your own by this time?" Lambourne queried.

Revell nodded rather gloomily. "Yes, I have, and it would be about as easy to prove to that jury tomorrow as the Einstein theory. Not that I care much about the inquest."

"Don't you? Well, neither do I. Which is why I intend to suppress a little evidence which, even if I took the pains to blurt it out, would only be considered highly irrelevant. If I told them that about midnight on the night before last Ellington was seen walking about the grounds, they'd probably ask me what the devil it had to do with Marshall."

"Good heavens! Who saw him?"

"I did. You see, I happen to be a very bad sleeper and I often go for a stroll late at night. And that night was the hottest of the year—I knew I should find it hard to get a wink, so I thought I'd take a turn round the buildings."

"And you saw Ellington?"

"More than that, I met him and spoke to him. He told me he was doing exactly the same thing—taking a stroll because of the heat. We walked once around the ring and then went back to our respective habitations. At least he saw me go into the school house, and I presume he let himself into his own immediately afterward."

Why Didn't You Tell Me?

"But, my dear fellow, this seems frightfully important. Why on earth didn't you tell me about it before?"

"Because I didn't want you to know too much against Ellington all at once. It might have biased you in deciding whether the accident was faked or not. Now that you're pretty certain of that, I don't mind you knowing the lot."

"How do you know I'm pretty certain the accident was faked?"

"Because you had the excellent idea of visiting the swimming-bath in the dark. I was taking another stroll and I saw you go in and I saw you come out again in about half a minute, which is roughly the time it would take any reasonably intelligent person to spot what really happened. Or at any rate, what really couldn't have happened."

"Yes, quite," said Revell eagerly. "I could see the water rippling distinctly. And I notice, too, that footsteps sound differently when the bath is full."

"You might add that the whole place smells differently—there's nothing quite so unmistakable as the smell of the water in a swimming-bath."

A silence followed, which Revell broke. "It would be amusing if Ellington gave evidence that he met you at that suspicious hour."

Lambourne laughed. "You bet he won't. As a matter of fact, he visited me here an hour ago to discuss that very point. He promised not to say he'd seen me if I promised not to say I'd seen him."

Meat and Rice A Combination Of Rare Delight

Can Be Baked in One Dish and Served Directly From the Oven.

By Dorothea Duncan.

TODAY'S main dinner dish is another one of those delightful meat and rice concoctions that can be baked in one dish and served hot from the oven in the same dish in which it has been cooked. Prepare it by the following recipe:

Casserole of Liver and Rice.

1 cup rice
1 quart water
2 tablespoons butter or other fat
1 pound lamb's or calf's liver
2 cups stock
1 teaspoon caramel
2 teaspoons browned flour
2 tablespoons fat
Crumbs
Salt and pepper

Boil rice in the water and mash smooth with the fat. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Line well-greased casserole with the mixture, pressing the paste firmly against bottom and sides, and leaving a large hollow in the center. Set in a cold place until firm. Meanwhile, boil the liver, drain, chop fine and season with salt. Heat the soup stock, seasoned with caramel. Make a brown sauce with the fat, browned flour and soup stock, and add the minced liver. Fill the hollow in the center of the rice with the liver mixture, sprinkle with crumbs and brown in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit).

Caramel is made by putting one cup of sugar into a pan and melting very slowly over direct heat. Cook the sugar until dark brown, being careful not to scorch. Add the hot water, 1 cup, and cook slowly until a thick sirup is formed. (Be sure that the water is hot. Cold water will make the hot sugar spatter). This will keep indefinitely in a covered glass fruit jar and is a popular flavoring for desserts, soups, meat sauces and confectionery.

Exquisite Slips Are Best 'Buy' On List Today

Prices and Quality Make One Want to Order Them by Dozen.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF THERE'S any one thing that arouses our buying instincts it's a slip sale. Even an irritable budget overstrained at Christmas time is lenient toward this event. Once or twice a year a large local store is twice, thrice and many times blessed by us all for its phenomenal selling of exquisite slips at staggeringly low sums.

Call there now and you will find slips that look and feel luxuriously expensive, down to a low of $1.69. Or, if you're a quantity fiend, three for $5. You'll want to buy these by the dozens. They are guaranteed to be satisfactory, and if they're not, back they go to the manufacturers, and presto there are new ones for you. All seams are doubly reinforced and pull proof. The fabric, a fine, soft silk, will not—positively will not—shrink.

There are tailored and lace-trimmed styles with V and straight necks. For the most part they are tearose and white, although there are a few in navy and black.

Book Scrolls for Originality.

JUST as an interesting volume is always a welcome gift to a book lover, so, as a general thing is a pair of book ends. But if you prefer something more original, a little different, you're apt to choose the book scroll in preference to the ends.

The scroll is a self-expanding gadget that holds one book or ten. The wide metal curleycue which acts as a kind of spring curls out and forward, giving room for book after book the further out it goes. These, among other unique gift suggestions are on display now in a large downtown store. They come in almost any color, and sell for $1 and $1.50.

A "Vanity" for Men.

YOU'D hardly suspect a certain little pigskin case of holding very much at all. When you open it up, it's a pleasing surprise to find a comb, a nail file and a mirror.

While men disdain vanity cases and what not, surely here's a utilitarian article they would count remarkably handy.

The case is about the length of the usual pocket comb and little thicker than the comb itself. It is an ideal size for a man's pocket—or a woman's purse.

Colors white, green, red and blue. The price, 25 cents.

Bargain-Seekers' Paradise.

IF THERE'S a bargain anywhere in town, trust your shop-hound to run it down. For weeks we've been on the trail of what we thought would prove a find to anyone with bargain instincts. And lo, we have found it and it is truly a happy hunting ground.

The place is a small downtown shop where there are at least ten worthwhile bargains within an arms reach of wherever you stand. At random, here are a few of the phenomenal "buys" available there.

A box of excellent face powder plus a large indelible lipstick (in any one of many luscious shades) for 99 cents. The price most anywhere is $2. A leather case containing a waterproof, smudgeproof, "mascary" and brush, for 59 cents. Regular price, 85 cents. A bath oil, English make, in either pine or lavendar, 69 cents. Peasant-Made Novelties.

AN interesting spot to visit is the peasant table in an F street store. Here you'll find scads of novelties peasant made. There are dolls, dressed in native costume, toy balls made up of several different colored sections that are screwed together; cigarette cases, statuettes, powder boxes, cookie jars, nut and fruit bowls, salad bowls, and large wooden spoons to match. Prices here range from 25 cents to $3.

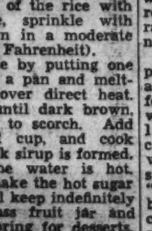
FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

By Pattie Ellicott.

WASHINGTON hostesses in the smart world of fashion often have the same culinary problems as the home makers of less pretention menages. Chief among these is what to provide for the sweet course. It must be tasty, tempting to the fickle appetites of the average family and, above all different.



MRS. EDGE.

Mrs. Walter E. Edge, wife of the former Senator and diplomat from New Jersey, has surprised her friends many times by using what she calls "Fig Custard" and which all her guests indorse as most worth while. In her handsome home on Rhode Island avenue the Senator and Mrs. Edge often had dinner parties. "Fig Custard" was a favorite sweet then and it was made much in this way:

Fig Custard.

1 quart milk
2 tablespoons corn starch
¾ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks
½ pound figs
¼ cup boiling water
¼ cup sugar
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
3 egg whites
3 tablespoons powdered sugar

Scald the milk. Mix cornstarch, sugar and salt. Pour on gradually scalded milk and cook in double boiler 20 minutes. Add egg yolks, slightly beaten, stir and cook 3 minutes.

Cut figs in small pieces, put in double boiler, add water, sugar and 1 tablespoon lemon juice and cook until figs are soft. Combine mixtures and cool; then turn into serving dish. Beat whites until stiff and add powdered sugar gradually, while beating constantly; then add ½ tablespoon lemon juice. Pile by spoonfuls over pudding just before serving.

Three Brides in House of Representatives And Three in Senate Recall Ancient Adage

Trio of Newest Wives in House Met Husbands in Washington.

If Old Superstition Is True Congress Can Expect an Easy Session.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"A BRIDE IN THE house brings luck."

If this ancient superstition were still prevalent, the House of Representatives would now have a lot of luck looking its way. For it has three brides—not in it, but as wives of Representatives so closely connected with it they will probably spend a good deal of time in Congressional galleries this session.

Although one of these brides came from the West, another from the South and the other from the East, all three met their mates in Washington.

Honeymoon in Mexico.

Attractive, slender Mrs. Harry Coffee is a native of Omaha, Neb., and attended the university in her home State. She majored in journalism but "never seriously considered working on a newspaper," even though her father, Harvey Newbranch, is a widely known journalist and editor of the Omaha World-Herald. A member of Theta Sigma Phi, national journalistic fraternity for women, and Alpha Phi, social sorority, she was "almost too busy with college affairs to think much about a career." One of her friends at the university was later to be her sister-in-law, so while she met Representative Coffee here, she already knew a great deal about him when she came to Washington to be secretary to Senator Edward R. Burke of Nebraska.

After their wedding the Coffees spent their honeymoon in Mexico, where in the wife's own words, "we saw everything from musty monasteries to bull fights."

Mrs. Coffee believes "woman's active participation in politics is, in many cases, both a privilege and a pleasure." She expects her own role from now on, however, to be quiet and passive because she thinks "Women often hurt, more than they help, their husbands, when they take too much interest in politics."

Blonde, blue-eyed Mrs. Robert A. Green, wife of Representative Green, of Florida, is one of the youngest of all the wives on Capitol Hill. Married in October, she and Representative Green started at once on the congressional tour of the Orient. The only bride in the party, Mrs. Green laughingly admits she got advice on all sides as to how a representative's wife should conduct herself in Washington.

Given Much Advice.

"Some advised me to concentrate on my home and to keep my nose out of politics," she said. "Others encouraged me to take an active hand in anything that concerns my husband. I haven't yet made up my mind just what I'll do. I've been too busy."

She has spent some time "learning how to cook, and some time unpacking wedding gifts and souvenirs I bought on the trip," she said. "Then, too, I've been going down to the office to help out there—although I'm not on the pay roll."

This time last year she was a journalism student at the University of Flordia. Coming to Washington to visit friends in August, she met Representative Green. Two months later they were married, and two days after the wedding, they left for the Orient, on what Mrs. Green recalls as "the most thrilling trip of my life." She particularly enjoyed visiting China and Japan, but she remembers most pleasantly Hawaii. "An evening on the beach at Waikiki is one thing I shall never forget," she said.

Mrs. Reilly Talented.

One of the most talented of all Congressional wives is the bride of Representative Michael Reilly of Wisconsin. Prominent as a soprano soloist in musical circles of both Washington and her native city, New York, Mrs. Reilly—the former Miss Mary Isobel Hall, planned first to be concert pianist. After studying. Later, she decided on vocal work as her career. Now that she is married, she doesn't intend to spend all her time making calls, and attending teas and receptions. "I shall, of course, find some time to continue my study of voice," she said, "although I probably won't do any more concert work."

Shortly after her wedding last September, she went with Representative Reilly to Wisconsin and "enjoyed the trip no end."

If brides do bring luck, the Senate can expect its share too. Since the close of last session, three of its members have also decided wedlock and padlock are not synonymous, that "it is not good for man to live alone."

When the former Miss Doris Cross became Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, her wedding made the front pages of newspapers all over the country. West Coast newspapers not long ago headlined the marriage of Senator Lewis B. Schwellenback when the Senator from Washington took a bride from his home State.

The latest of the brides, Mrs. Millard Tydings, the former Mrs. Eleanor Davies Cheeseborough, has been prominent in Washington social circles for a number of years. Senator and Mrs. Tydings are expected to return from their honeymoon cruise next week.

With six brides watching from the galleries, affairs should move smoothly this session on Capitol Hill. Undoubtedly, bills would pass more easily and adjournment would come earlier if members bore in mind "A bride in the house brings luck."

Injuries Show Management Lack in Home

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE BROWN house was famous for supplying news to the local papers. One week there was a fire—not serious, to be sure, but enough to call out the engines. Another week the eldest child had to be rushed to the hospital to have his stomach pumped out as a result of taking poison by mistake. Sally Brown fell out of the window and broke her leg. Mr. Brown ran over the puppy once, and smashed through the garage door with his car another time. Susan burned herself severely by knocking a pan of burning grease off the stove. Mrs. Brown tripped over a rug in the dark hall, fell down stairs and broke her hip.

Sheer Carelessness.

Everyone sympathized and exclaimed over the hard luck the Browns had. However, it was not hard luck, but sheer carelessness.

When a series of accidents occurs, and still more when catastrophes are chronic in a house or family, it is well to take stock of the situation. Any factory or plant with an epidemic of accidents would at once look into the organization and personnel in an effort to find out what lay behind the trouble.

Obviously someone in the Brown family was careless. Unguarded windows, badly lighted hallways, poisons within reach and mismanaged kitchen routine, all pointed to lack of foresight on the parents' part, probably the mother's. Two serious motor accidents on the home driveway indicated the father's lack of forethought.

Irresponsible Parents.

There are hundreds of haphazard households of this kind. The parents take no responsibility for the accidents, and in time come to look on their misfortunes with a kind of grim pride. A home where there are children is really an institution, and should be managed with the same care and provision for safety that would be required of a larger plant.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Romance Has Tragic Ending; Woman Asks Help in Making Other Friends.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: For some time I have read your column with much interest. My problem is this: Several years ago I was engaged to be married to a lawyer of international prominence (he had served as Solicitor-General under two Presidents) but two days before we were to have been married, he died.

I have lived in Washington for two years, having come here from my native State, Virginia. While I am employed, I find life very dull and uninteresting because of lack of companionship. I have no way of meeting desirable friends. I enjoy good literature, music, art, travel and a well-appointed home. It will be appreciated if you will publish this letter in the hope that I may meet someone who is interested in the same things I am. I may add that I am a few years past 35. LEE.

* * * *

DEAR LEE: Very recently I met a woman of the highest type, possessing engaging wit, buoyant vitality, extraordinary good humor, splendid mind, great human understanding and assured social position, who expressed a desire to do something on behalf of persons whose lives are darkened by lack of satisfying friendships. On reading your letter, it occurred to me that you two should meet. I have talked with her, and she has expressed cordial willingness to have you call at her home one evening at your mutual convenience. If you will get in touch with me, by letter or telephone, I shall be glad to arrange an introduction.

* * * *

If it should be that you are primarily interested in achieving friendships with men, may I suggest that a woman's chances of meeting interesting men are usually in direct ratio to her social contacts with dynamically interesting women. Wherefore I advise you not to pass up any opportunities for cultivating friends among those of your own sex. M. H.

In Re Domestic Worker.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: It seems careless wording of my answer to "Interested," published in your column January 3, led you to suppose the woman's organization mentioned as having headquarters at 50 East Thirteenth street, New York City, is exclusively concerned with bettering conditions of domestic workers.

* * * *

The organization is feminist, seeking better working conditions for all women, including those employed as domestics. The manifest neglect of the needs of domestic workers by feminist organizations has been due, not to lack of interest or awareness, but to a plethora of duties. Where so much is to be done, and so few to do it, some fields are bound to be neglected. Naturally that neglect falls upon fields lacking proper representation in the organization. For that reason your advice to "Interested," to convert her passive discontent into constructive activity, was to my way of thinking little short of inspired.

* * * *

As a first step in the right direction, "Interested" might familiarize herself with Social Insurance Bill, H. R. 2827, when, or before, it comes before Congress. Yours sincerely, M. S. S.

* * * *

DEAR M. S. S.: Your statement: "If she (Interested) will write Miss Margaret Cowl, 50 East Thirteenth street, New York City, she will learn that a great band of women, some of them internationally known, are taking an interest in the domestic worker and seeking a practical solution of a very vexing problem," did lead me to suppose such was the primary aim of the organization referred to. I regret having confused the facts when commenting on your first communication, and sincerely appreciate your courtesy in clarifying the point. M. H.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

A FRIEND of a friend of a friend of hers gave hers the idea, one afternoon when she skipped up on a strange front porch to keep out of the rain. But the house turned out to belong to the friend of the friend of the friend, so she stayed for a cup of tea and left with the most pleasant idea for jiggling the furniture in her living room and focusing the arrangement around a big mirrored panel between two windows at the end of the room.

Her mirror was quite a handsome one, reaching all the way from the picture molding to the baseboard, and the walls were in pale gray, with white woodwork. A long, low, modern beverage table (2) in white with a blue mirror she placed in front of the mirror panel, then drew up to it a pair of lounge chairs in coral coverings (1, 3). Against the long, unbroken wall she put a deep blue sofa (6) with an end table (5) at the left end, a coffee table (7) in front, and another easy chair (8) in pale gold drawn near. Against the wall opposite the windows she placed a long table (9) and on the door wall a large cabinet (4). The room is modern in a tranquil way and, with the colorings she already had there, she added draperies of palest gold over white Venetian blinds for the windows, and selected a broadloom rug in a light, clear gray a little deeper than the walls.

Balanced Diet Helps to Avoid Gallstone Evil

Disease of Digestive Tract May Cause Infection of Gall Bladder.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

AS most of us know, the gall bladder, which lies close to and beneath the liver, is a hollow sack-like affair which can hold nearly two ounces of fluid. Its walls are quite thin, although there is enough muscle tissue present to permit emptying of the organ as a result of contraction. It serves as a reservoir or a storage space for bile.

Because of disease that may exist along the digestive tract (of which the gall bladder is a part) the structure may become infected and in many cases stones will form, largely due to the fact that a substance called cholesterol crystalizes from the bile. This phenomenon may be accelerated by inflammation when a secretion rich in lime salts is poured out, and the result is the deposit of masses of lime, bacteria, cells, and cholesterol (gallstones). Once formed the stones tend to increase in size and after a time give trouble because they are too large to pass through the duct that leads from the gall bladder into the intestine.

Infection Causes Pus.

In some circumstances infection within the gall bladder leads to the presence of pus and we say then that the gall bladder is actually inflamed. Then thin wall may become gangrenous and as a result perforation may take place permitting escape of the contents into a neighborning structure such as the stomach or the duodenum. This is followed by the development of an abscess about the gall bladder or occasionally pus may invade the peritoneal cavity. While such an accident is not the usual outcome of gall bladder disease it sometimes occurs, particularly among elderly persons.

In any acute state of the gall bladder itself it is wise to wait until the inflammation has subsided before attempting operation. On the other hand, delay should not permit or invite rupture with its serious consequences. Fine discrimination is demanded between a waiting policy and that which calls for bold surgery.

Secretion Important.

We may avoid gall bladder disease by adherence to a balanced diet that does not contain an excess of fat, by guarding against overweight, by moderate exercise, by reasonable attention to the digestive tract, and by making certain that infections have completely disappeared before we are up and about carrying the normal load of work.

We must regard the secretion from the liver as important. Furthermore, good hygiene will enable most of us to go through life with little personal knowledge of the symptoms of jaundice—liver or gall bladder disease. Sometimes the mucous membrane of the bile ducts may be so swollen as to cause obstruction. This is the condition commonly known as catarrhal jaundice. It is rarely of any great significance and the symptoms disappear within a week or so.

2 New Deaths Raise Capital Car Toll to 12

Coroner's Jury Releases Motorist in Death of Steeplejack.

16 Operators' Permits Revoked in Speeding Convictions.

Yesterday's grim story of the streets included the following chapters:

The death of Horace Stowe, 26, of Suitland, Md., struck by a lamp-post knocked over by a truck.

The death of John Campbell, 67, of 224 Eleventh street northeast, captain of the day watch at the District Jail, from traffic injuries.

The exoneration by a coroner's jury of Max Fulton, 28, of 512 Columbia road northwest, of blame in connection with the traffic death of James Riley Kane, 61, of 409 Third street northwest.

Revocation of 16 operators' permits for speeding convictions.

The deaths of Stowe and Campbell brought the year's death toll to 12.

Stowe was waiting for a street car at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast when he was hit by the falling lamp post.

Truck Hit Post.

Leon Bryant, colored, 24, of the first block of Seventeenth street northwest, was cranking a truck nearby. The truck apparently was in gear because when its motor started the truck crashed into the post.

Stowe was removed to Casualty Hospital. There it was found that both his legs were broken and that his skull was probably fractured. Bryant was questioned at the Fifth Precinct.

Campbell died at Casualty Hospital, where he was removed Monday when he slipped on ice and fell against the moving automobile of Samuel M. Hendrix, 35, of 210 Ninth street southeast. His skull was fractured.

A former steeplejack, Kane was looking for work when he was fatally injured on January 8 when struck by Fulton's automobile. He was removed to Garfield Hospital where he died Tuesday from a crushed chest.

Before Kane died, volunteers were asked to give blood for a transfusion. Capt. LeRoy Eroh, brother of Maj. Eroh, head of the Volunteers of America in the city, was the donor.

But the blood did not save the steeplejack's life. He left his widow nothing, not even enough money to provide a burial plot. "It's not the poverty that worries her," said Maj. Eroh, it's the thought of not being able to give her husband an honorable burial. She is so brave about it that we are trying every way to assist her."

16 Permits Revoked.

The persons whose permits were suspended were the following:

Second offenders, 90-day periods: Hugh C. Francis, 1840 Lamont street, convicted of going 58 miles an hour, and Harry E. Bliss, 638 Columbia road, 50 miles an hour.

First offenders, James H. Monroe, 3750 Oliver street, 35 miles an hour, 15 days; Albert B. Leonberger, 1319 Holly street, 35 miles an hour, 15 days; Peter H. Luehrs, 1237 G street southeast, 38 miles an hour, 15 days; Howard D. Leslie, 1817 L street northeast, 35 miles an hour, 15 days; Clifford K. Long, 1344 W street, 36 miles an hour, 15 days; Adolph A. Hersberg, 1316 Twelfth street, 38 miles an hour, 15 days; May P. Smith, 2153 California street, 38 miles an hour, 15 days; Presley Wedding, 1825 Kilbourn place, 36 miles an hour, 15 days; Howard Layton, 1239 Twenty-eighth street, 40 miles an hour, 30 days; Blackstone Smith, 3421 Massachusetts avenue, 40 miles an hour, 30 days; Adam Horn, 67 Fenton street northeast, 55 miles an hour, 90 days; Wallace S. Linfoot, East Falls Church, Va., 38 miles an hour, 15 days; George L. Jenks, Chevy Chase, Md., 38 miles an hour, 15 days, and Milcolm L. Monroe, Chevy Chase, Md., 46 miles an hour, 30 days.

A woman was seriously hurt and several other persons shaken up when a Capital Transit Co. bus and a coal truck were in collision at Tenth and P streets northwest.

Mrs. Delie King, 44, of 2617 Third street northwest, a passenger in the bus, operated by Jake J. Vermeulen, 33, of Brentwood, Md., was treated at Casualty Hospital for a severe head laceration and possible concussion of the brain.

Two others injured seriously were Willie Minor, colored, of 330 I street southwest, fractured pelvis and internal injuries, and Beulah Witmore, 61, of 1424 K street northwest, fractured right leg and concussion of the brain. Both were pedestrians and struck down by motorists.

Speed Record!

The other day a twin-motor Douglas passenger plane shattered the passenger schedule time from New Orleans to New York. The report mentioned that a tail wind helped the plane part of the way. But it didn't take any "wind" to help Sidney Owen, of 2138 O street, rent the vacant room in his home. This little want ad rented his vacant room the same morning it appeared in The Post:

Drivers Offer 'Silly' Excuses In Court, Investigator Finds

Cruising Reporter Spends Day Among Excited Crowd of Reckless Autoists and Finds Few Who Can 'Explain.'

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, has been cruising in a police car. Yesterday he varied his activities by visiting Traffic Court. It is The Post's desire merely to learn "the reason why" of violations. This is the thirteenth in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

They crowd and shove their way into a dingy, low-ceilinged room. The air is stale and unwholesome. A few find seats. Others stand and wait—sometimes from early morning until long after noon. The atmosphere is tense. Everyone is restless, fidgety and nervous.

One by one, names are called. Every minute or so, someone steps forward to face a dignified, white-haired man who is leaning back in a swivel chair carefully sorting papers.

A young woman is standing there now. She looks up at the white-haired man and then lowers her eyes. She is twisting the handle of her purse. Her hands tremble. She speaks in a monotone, her voice hardly audible.

This was a scene in Traffic Court yesterday. Abandoning (for the day) our cruising quest for the "reason why" behind traffic law violations, we stood in the background, listening and watching while the daily "crop" of lawbreakers "told it to the judge."

Crowd Tense.

Each time a name was called, each time a fine or jail sentence was handed down, a murmur swept through the crowded courtroom. Those awaiting their turns at the bar strained eyes and ears to "see what the other fellow got."

The young woman—she was attractive and well dressed—who stood before Judge Gus A. Schuldt was very nervous. She didn't like to be there. She would have given anything to avoid the ordeal. (She proved this by attempting to "straighten matters out" with the corporation counsel before entering court.)

But all this trouble, all this embarrassment, never entered her head when she was driving her expensive-make automobile at 40 miles an hour along Rhode Island avenue northeast. When another car swerved into the curb to let her speed past, she never dreamed of appearing in Traffic Court to face a serious charge.

While Washingtonians were dying from accident injuries—while they lay painfully injured in some hospital—this woman never suspected that she could contribute to a grave problem by driving her automobile at rapid rates of speed.

"I Don't Know."

But there she was, standing before the judge. Why, she was asked, did you violate the law?

"I really don't know," she replied. "I guess I just didn't realize."

That was her only excuse. She was convicted and fined $15. But on top of that, her name will be sent to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, where, after consideration, a special board will probably suspend her driver's permit. She didn't think of that, either.

Nobody likes to go to Traffic Court.

It is a good place to avoid. Yet, every hour of every day, District motorists violate traffic laws and Traffic Court is the only answer.

Dirty, Dingy Court.

With automobile registrations far exceeding any city of comparable size, Washington boasts (?) a unique Traffic Court. It is dirty, dingy and smelly. It is too small to adequately handle the daily crowd. The ceiling can be touched by standing on tip-toe. Until recently, the ventilation was poor.

Maybe this has something to do with repeated law infractions. Maybe the motorist thinks the whole thing is a joke. Washington's Traffic Court certainly gives that impression.

Judge Schuldt and his fellow jurists do the best they can under existing conditions. They all agree that a new municipal center, housing all four courts, would solve the problem.

Foolish Explanations.

Yesterday was just another day. Prisoners before the bar were given a chance to "explain." All types of violators were represented—the speeder, the reckless driver, the light "jumper."

Some had plausible excuses. Some didn't have any excuse at all. Others tried vainly to explain.

"It was like this, Judge. I was watchin' my speedometer—honest—I can't understand it."

"I have been driving for 10 years—never been arrested before. I would appreciate a break."

"The officer must be mistaken. I was in a little hurry, but I just know I wasn't violating the law."

And so they went—foolish excuses, feeble explanations.

Today, the courtroom again will be jammed.

Roberts Seeks To Buy Canal For Highway

Contested Route Would Provide High-Speed Service to Virginia.

Acquisition of the bed of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal for highway purposes is envisaged in a suggestion made yesterday by People's Counsel William A. Roberts that the Public Utilities Commission study litigation in the District Supreme Court in which the Federal Government is striving to regain control of the canal bed.

The canal bed runs from the vicinity of Thirtieth and K streets northwest to the District line, along the banks of the Potomac River.

Roberts believes the bed could be used for an extension of the Potomac-Rock Creek Parkway or it could be used for high-speed buses between the District and Virginia, using a cloverleaf turn at the Key Bridge.

Ease Congestion.

Such a line, Roberts said, would ease traffic congestion along M street northwest and would allow a faster schedule for Virginia-District bus lines.

The canal company, operating under a Federal charter, more than 100 years old, now controls approximately 118 acres of District land, with an assessed valuation of $1,000,000 upon which no taxes are paid.

For the past several years, no boats have used the conal. On the theory that the company has abandoned its franchise, the Federal Government is striving to regain possession of the mouth of the canal bed. Their contention is that the abandonment of the bed caused a reversion of the land to the Federal Government.

Canal company officials have asserted that the canal has not been abandoned, but that the water is being used to generate power for a paper mill in Georgetown.

If such is the case, Roberts suggested that the commission should take jurisdiction of the power company just as it exercises supervision over other power companies.

Should it develop that the canal is not used in power generation, Roberts believes that steps should be taken to repossess the land to make it available for highway purposes.

Typhoid Danger In RFC Is Denied

Assurance that a minor outbreak of typhoid fever among employes of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will not spread was given yesterday by District Health Officer George C. Ruhland. In the past month three employes of the RFC have been stricken and one died from the affliction.

"A thorough inquiry has been made," Dr. Ruhland said, "and there is no evidence that there are any carriers within the RFC or in the home of the stricken men."

"Investigation revealed all three of the men had gone on a trip down the Potomac River at the same time to the same place.

"I believe the men were infected from drinking water or sour milk, which they may have taken on the trip."

About 18 employes of the RFC have submitted to voluntary inoculations against the disease. Examinations of water used at the RFC and eating houses in the vicinity of the office have showed no contaminatoin, Dr. Ruhland said.

WPA Men 'Too Tired' To Attend Fund Hearing

Hudson, Mass., Jan. 22 (AP).—Hudson WPA workers who either "had colds," or "were too tired after shoveling snow" to attend the special town meeting called last night to appropriate money to carry on their work, were circulating petitions today for a second special meeting. They asked that a special meeting be called at once as virtually all funds for WPA work in town are now exhausted, and without special action the work must be suspended and many of the men and their families be returned to relief rolls.

The special town meetings last night had to be adjourned after selectmen had gone out into the highways and byways in a vain effort to assemble a quorum of 100 votes to pass upon the appropriation.

Price-Fixing Cited in Woes Of Capitalism

Dr. Harold G. Moulton Talks on Trade to Commerce Body.

Names Basic Principles of Economic System Operation.

The present dislocation of capitalism is due to the price-pegging activities of monopolies, cartels and trade associations, Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, last night told the second annual banuet of the Junior Board of Commerce.

In a concise but forceful exposition before 200 members and guests of the organization in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel, Dr. Moulton said that the economic system under which we operate depends on three basic principles, reward for business efficiency, consequent lowering of prices to drive out competitors and thus the spreading to the masses through lower prices of the benefits of increased efficiency.

The impediments to the smooth functioning of this machinery, he explained, have been the rise of monopolies, cartels and trade associations. These groups, he said, have done their best to maintain the status quo and failed to disseminate, by lower prices, increased purchasing power to the people.

Reverses Whole Basis.

"When industry organizes to determine the market at given prices," he warned, "then it reverses the whole basis on which capitalism is founded."

During the period between 1922 and 1929, he pointed out, business efficiency increased roughly 25 per cent. Annd, yet, he said, though wages only increased about 5 per cent during this period, prices were not cut more than 5 per cent.

"Retail prices did not decrease at all during those years," he added. "The benefits of technological improvement were not being passed on to the mass of the people. Technological unemployment crept in because those dropped by increased industrial efficiency were unable to be reabsorbed by new industry. Consumer income had not risen sufficiently."

In answer to those who charged that you could not force monopolies to reduce prices because of "human nature," Dr. Moulton pointed out that they could be shown that lower prices meant increased output and, in the end, higher profits.

"Since the early stages of recovery, after August, 1933," he concluded, "there has been no noticeable increase in prices, though both wages and the volume of manufactured goods have risen. That is the most encouraging sign for the future that I know.

Shouldn't Boost Prices.

"The main concern of the present is not to begin boosting prices, because the moment this is done you lay the basis for future instability. If we continue to increase the volume of goods during the next five years and keep prices down, then we will do the most possible towards laying the foundation for enduring prosperity."

Dr. Moulton was introduced by Corcoran Thom, jr., president of the junior board. Thom also briefly presented some of the distinguished guests present at the dinner, including Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee; Walter M. Bastian, president of the District Bar Association; John Saul, president of the Washington Board of Trade; John Grammer, director of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce; David A. Skinner, executive secretary, United States Chamber of Commerce, and James E. Colliflower, president, Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Just after dinner, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis arrived unostentatiously and sat in the balcony by himself. Noticed by someone at the speakers' table, he was importuned to ascend the rostrum. With a smile, he declined and remained by himself.

The evening was closed by an hour and a half of entertainment donated by local theaters and arranged by Arthur Clephane. Gordon Hittenmark, radio personality, served as master of ceremonies. Otis T. Wingo was chairman of the banquet.

Farm Aid to Stay, Ezekiel Declares

Federal aid to farmers will continue, Mordecai J. Ezekiel, Department of Agriculture economist, told the Washington Hebrew Congregation Brotherhood last night.

"The AAA," he said, "achieved its objective and, regardless of legal developments, some method of Federal aid to agriculture is bound to remain."

He predicted both the Democratic and Republican parties would insert planks in their platforms calling for Federal help to the farmers. The chief difference between the two, he said, will be the method of carrying out the program.

Substantial increases in farm product prices since 1932, Ezekiel added, were produced primarily by the activities of the AAA in paying farmers to reduce their acreage.

Dye Injection As Kidney Test Explained Here

Urological Group Closes Session as Guests of Medical Society.

The use of injected dyes as a means of determining by X-ray the extent of injuries to kidneys and urinary tract in automobile and other accidents was described last night before the Medical Society of the District by Dr. G. G. Irwin, of Charleston, W. Va.

Dr. A. I. Dodson and Dr. Charles Nelson, of Richmond, reported that contrary to popular opinion, kidney stones occur in Negroes. Their studies reveal that more than a third of the stones occur in the Negro race. Their survey was based on 4,618 patients admitted to St. Philip's Hospital, Medical College of Virginia at Richmond, and 5,238 white patients admitted to Memorial Hospital at the same college.

75 Specialists Here.

These addresses marked the final assembly in the second annual meeting of the Mid-Atlantic branch of the American Urological Association in which 75 specialists in Urology gathered in Washington from Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia as guests of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and the Washington members of the American Urological Association.

The morning was spent in Garfield Memorial Hospital, where clinics were presented by the following Washington urologists: Drs. H. A. Fowler, Francis R. Hagner, W. P. Herbst, Adam Kemble, R. M. LeComte, E. A. Merritti, W. Calhoun Sterling and Thomas C. Thompson.

During the afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel, papers were presented by Drs. J. A. C. Colston, Baltimore; Joseph F. Geisinger, Richmond; Albert E. Goldstein, Baltimore; Linwood D. Keyser, Roanoke; John H. Neff, Charlottesville; Howard L. Tolson, Cumberland; W. Houston Toulson, Baltimore, and R. D. Gill, Wheeling.

Colston New President.

The night meeting was also addressed by Drs. Horatio N. Dorman, of Washington, and Lloyd G. Lewis, of Baltimore.

At the business meeting the following officers for the coming year were elected: President, Dr. J. A. C. Colston, Baltimore; vice president, Dr. John H. Neff, Charlottesville, and secretary, Dr. A. I. Dodson, Richmond.

The local committee on arrangements was Dr. Ivy Albert Pelzman, W. P. Herbst and Frederick A. Reuter.

Blanton Plans Personal Study Of District Bill

Texan to Master Details of Appropriation; Defends Red School Rider.

Notice that District affairs and the 1937 appropriation bill are going to receive his personal attention was given on the floor of the House yesterday by Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas.

Blanton is to assume chairmanship of the House District appropriations sub-committee while Representative Clarence L. Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, is busying himself with the tasks of the Agriculture appropriations sub-committee.

"As long," Blanton told the House, "as I am in charge of the bill I am going to get every bit of information available. When this measure comes up I'll be able to tell the members of this House what's in it."

Defends Red Rider.

Representative Blanton's speech encompassed some of the most controversial issues in the battles over District affairs. He took to task Representative J. William Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania, for Ditter's speech on the floor the other day.

The anti-communist teaching rider carried in the last District appropriation, Blanton said, had not been "sneaked" through Congress. It was a piece of legislation incorporated in an appropriation bill on which both the House and the Senate had opportunity to vote.

"And," Blanton declared, "no communistic influence is going to take it off the statute books."

The Board of Education, Blanton revealed, was asked for a report on the activities of Dr. Frank W. Ballou. Request was made, he said, on January 10. On January 13 the board replied it would furnish all information which might be desired.

Ditter's Denial.

Representative Ditter took the floor later and said that Blanton had attempted to misinform the House and misrepresent the situation.

"There is," Ditter said, "absoutely no connection between the character study program of the public schools, about which Blanton has complained to the House, and communism.

"The only basis the gentleman from Texas had for his remarks was that there was a man named Charters employed in the District school system who once was employed in the Soviet school system, to which he had been called to give them advice and help in laying out their school system."

Board Risks U. S. Disfavor On 'Gag' Rule

Schools Group Defeats Submission to Budget of 5-Year Plan.

Warning of Dr. Ballou Vain; Bitter Debate Precedes Vote.

After sharp debate, the Board of Education yesterday voted against submitting to the Budget Bureau an outline of the proposed five-year school expansion program in spite of warnings by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, that in taking such action the board is risking violation of the "gag" rule.

Dr. Ballou, at Monday's meeting of the board, recommended that the outline be forwarded to the District Commissioners "with the request that the Bureau of the Budget advise the District authorities as to whether preparation of such a bill is in accordance with the policy of the President."

Decision on the recommendation was deferred until yesterday, Indicating Monday that he would oppose placing of the five-year plan in the lap of the Budget Bureau, Henry I. Quinn, board member, led the fight yesterday to defeat Dr. Ballou's recommendation.

Joining Quinn in arguments that to accede might result in dictation of school policies by the Budget Bureau were Henry Gilligan and Robert A. Maurer. All three are lawyers. On the other side were George M. Whitwell and Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, Chairman Marion Wade Doyle, Dr. J. Hayden Johnson and Mrs. Mary McNeill did not enter the debate.

Ballou Gives Warning.

"I think it means everything to the board to do nothing that will seem improper to the Budget Bureau," warned Dr. Ballou. "Of course, if the board does not think it is necessary to investigate, that is its own responsibility. Maybe I'm too cautious, but I don't want to find myself in a position to be criticized by the bureau for not following instructions."

While Mrs. Smith sided with Whitwell during most of the debate, she voted with the majority. The latter was the only member to answer "Aye" on the question.

Deciding thus that the recently announced White House rule against advocacy of or opposition to future legislation by Government officials was not meant to apply to school matters, the board announced a citizens' meeting for February 7 to receive public suggestions on the five-year expansion project.

To Invite Citizens.

Representatives of citizens' associations and other civic groups will be invited to attend. The meeting was scheduled for 8 p. m.

The board voted to hold a special meeting next Monday afternoon to hear a fiscal report by Dr. Ballou and consider the appointment of a successor to Sarah E. Simons as head of the English department in senior and junior high schools. The superintendent indicated yesterday that he would recommend the selection of a candidate from outside Washington.

Earlier in the day, Dr. Ballou released copies of correspondence between himself and Mrs. E. N. Dingley, 5613 Thirteenth street northwest, in connection with use of the Weekly Reader in elementary schools. The letters were exchanged a year ago when Mrs. Dingley objected to her granddaughter's writing a theme on the subject, "Why the United States Should Enter the World Court," as set forth in an issue of the Weekly Reader.

Publication of the correspondence by Dr. Ballou was in deference to demands of George E. Sullivan, chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations committee investigating schoolbooks.

The superintendent informed Mrs. Dingley that subscription to the reader is optional. The latter subsequently withdrew her protest and thanked Dr. Ballou for his explanatory reply.

Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools, yesterday announced registrations for the second semester of night classes for white students will be accepted on February 3 after 6:30 p. m.

Evelyn Laye Betrays Rare Felicity in Greeting Mobs of Intruding Reporters

British Star Is Soon to Be Seen In Serious Play

Premiere Here Is Feb. 24; New Bill at Belasco; Week's New Bills.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is a difficult matter to catalogue the blondely beautiful Evelyn Laye, who yesterday landed in our midst—in suite 701 at the Hotel Willard to be exact.

Miss Laye may be looked upon as a singer—which she primarily is—or as a comedienne, or as a distinguished so-called "legitimate" actress which she will become when she assumes the principal femenine role of "Sweet Aloes" in the National Theater on February 24.

This new adventure in the legitimate theater engages the interest of this scintillant young British star no end, now that she definitely is approaching it.

The play of "Sweet Aloes" was written under the pseudonym of Jay Mallory, which is a playful stage name for Joyce Carey, the real author, who will be seen as an important member of the cast when the play is accorded its national premiere here on the twenty-fourth, prox., as we say in the counting house.

But about Miss Laye, who held court, in a manner of speaking, in the Willard yesterday evening.

She is about as you would expect from "Evensong," if you saw it, except probably a bit younger. Blonde, yes; stilted and actressy, no; personable and ingratiating, by all means.

She remembers with a persistent thrill the "kick" that accrued upon her New York appearance in Noel Coward's "Bitter Sweet" in 1929. One suspects that she still would like to play the role which she recently revived on the West Coast t othe further glory of a musical piece that was done scant justice in revival here by the Shuberts a few years ago.

Is Married to Lawton.

Miss Laye, you will recall, or perhaps not, is the wife, in private life, of Frank Lawton, a gifted young English actor, who will be remembered for a sterling piece of work opposite Diana Wynyard in Galesworthy's last play, "The Last River," and also in one of the principal roles of "David Copperfield," in which the juvenile Master Freddie Bartholomew went to town!

One gathers that it is among the more pronounced of Miss Laye's ambitions to appear eventually with her husband, the talented Mr. Lawton, in a drama in which both may be advantageously cast. There are plays in which she htinks they could have been admirably presented together, but they came along a little too late—things like "Young Woodley," for example, and one or two others that Miss Laye mentions in casual conversation.

"Sweet Aloes," in which she is to be seen for the first time on any stage in America at the National on February 24, affords her her first seriously dramatic role on the stage on either side of the Atlantic.

Born of theatrical parents, Evelyn Laye stil si a young woman who has attained fame as a result of her own individual endowments. Noted first as songstress—and she has a glorious soprano voice—she still has managed to assure herself of a place among the best of the dramatic actresses by the virtue of her work in "Evensong," the British-made picture that not so long ago occupied the screen at the Belasco Theater.

I took the trouble yesterday to inquire by what manner the process of ageing might have been so successfully accomplished. There was no such secrecy as prevailed, for example, when Helen Hayes was queried as to how she bulged her cheeks out to look like Queen Victoria in the final intervals of "Victoria Regina," the episode narrative of the life of the great-grandmother of the newly ascended occupant of the British throne.

Was Clever Makeup.

Miss Laye achieved the simulance of old age by a shrewd utilization of grease paint, powder and lining about the mouth. It was a superb piece of work.

There is in the background of everything this brilliant young player approaches, or has distantly in view a fine respect for the artistic advice of the talented young man who is her husband.

Frank Lawton is no tyro in his own name. But I doubt if he can sing. When it comes to a complete fulfillment of the function of the theater, I suspect that Evelyn, by reason of her vocalism, as well as histronic endownment, has something on her husband, as the saying goes.

This, strange to state, has no bearing as far as one is able to observe upon the state of their marital happiness. One judges them to be ideally happy. But anyone can make a mistake. In this instance, I hope one has not been made. It would be almost incomprehensible

There is a great admiration for the genius for the theater betrayed by Noel Coward in practically everything he writes by this blonde young woman, who approaches "Sweet Aloes" with such ebullient anticipation.

In assmuing the major role in this play, Miss Laye will be taking over a part that has been played with success onthe other side by Diana Wynyard. It was with her that Frank Lawton did one of his best bits of screen work in Galsworthy's "The Last River."

Miss Laye is glad that we remember that fine piece of character delineation. So are we.

We are also glad we remember her in "Bitter Sweet," "One Glorious Night," with John Boles, "Evensong," and the other fine things she has done for the screen.

We are especially glad to have among our memories the delightful hour spent with this fascinating young woman in her suite at the Willard yesterday.

British Star to Open Play Here

Post Staff Photo.

When "Sweet Aloes," a current London success, opens in the National Theater for the week of Monday, February 24, under the aegis of Lee Ephraim, co-producer with the Theater Guild of "Call It a Day," currently at the National, its star will be the blondely beautiful Evelyn Laye, brilliant young British singing and dramatic star whose newest likeness appears above. Miss Laye is a Washington visitor until Saturday and in her contacts with the ladies and gentlemen of the press yesterday betrayed herself also as a grand sport who can "take it" for hours of interviewing at a time. Miss Laye will appear here in the role played in London by Diana Wynyard, also well known to American cinema audiences.

Belasco

"COMRADESHIP." A Unique Films Creation, directed by G. W. Pabst, from an incident in real life on the Franco-German border. Presented in the Belasco Theater and reviewed on Wednesday afternoon.

THE CAST.

Wittkopp.....Ernst Busch
His Wife.....Elisabeth Wendt
Kasper.....Alexander Granach
Wilderer.....Fritz Kampers
Kaplan.....Gustav Puettjer
Jean, a French Miner..Daniel Mendaille
Emile, His Friend.....George Chalia
Francoise, Emile's Sister..Andree Ducret
And Old French Miner....Alex Bernard
His Grandson.....Pierre Louis

Here we have one of those grimly realistic depictions of life in one of its least attractive manifestations.

There is practically no romantic interest in this narrative, although I suspect that the gay dance scenes of the early reels were expected to create some such thing. There is, on the other hand, a deal of that smug sort of propaganda for the laborites that winds up a considerable kick for a certain sort of audience.

There is probably a political and social significance attaching to "Comradeship," as it projects itself into the Franco-Germanic intelligence that fails to assert itself in the instance of an American picturegoer's search for entertainment.

The story is of an underground adventure participated in by both German and French laborers. The thing comes off almost on the international line. It is remindful of "Transatlantic Tunnel," yet has few of that able picture's major merits to recommend it.

The cast means nothing to American audiences. All of the names are definitely and irremediably vague, if not entirely unknown.

The picture is one of those grisley depictions of how cruel life can be that brings actuality perhaps too close to the casual lives of the most of us.

There is not much in "Comradeship" that will warm the cockles of your heart. It is a grim, grisly and unrelenting exposition of what can happen when the unemployed of two nations are arrayed against each other in the bowels of the earth.

There is a final exchange of verbal fireworks that gets no one anywhere except at the artistic parting of the ways where realism ceases to be a handmaiden of convincing drama.

The short subjects embellishing the bill are, as usual, many and varied.

Foremost among them is the new issue of the Pathe News, dealing at length and with utmost efficiency with the major events in the life of the late lamented King George V of England and the ascension to the throne of His Majesty Edward VIII.

Then there is the seemingly inevitable song-reel, in which Frank Luther had to play his part of a tonsilarized patient of a fellow who thought all of his charges could sing and some fine old songs are dragged over the coals for no good reason and everything comes out all right in the end.

There is a moderately exciting reel about sponge-fishing in the Mexican Gulf that concludes a program that will appeal, especially to the morbidly curious and the ambulance chasers. N. B. B.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Joint recital by Kathryn Meisle, contralto, and Emanuel Feuermann, violoncellist, in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom Wednesday morning. Stuart Ross and Wolfgang Rebner, accompanists. Program: For voice —"Tu lo sai" (Torelli), "Minuetto allegro" (Gaffi), "Schwer liegt auf dem Herzen" from "Nadeschda" (Goring Thomas), "Provenzalisches Lied" (Schumenn), "Ich trage meine Minne," "Schlechtes Wetter," "Sie wissen's nicht" (Strauss), "Der Erlkoenig" (Schubert), "As Fair Is She as Noonday Light" (Rakhmaninov), "Homeland Mine" (Grechaninov), "Reverie" (Arenski), "Les Filles de Cadiz" (Delibes); For violoncello—Sonata in G minor (Bach), Variations on a Theme by Mozart (Beethoven), "Prayer" (Bloch), "Allegro Spirituoso" (Senaille), "Zigeunerweisen" (Sarasate-Feuermann).

As both these estimable musicians were heard here last season, the recital was a pleasurable occasion for reneweing acquaintance with their sterling artistry. Singer and instrumentalist were at the top of their form, and throughout the program one's enjoyment was unmarred by any delinquencie. in technique. Moreover, the musicians were assisted by highly expert accompanists, sympathetic to the slightest shade of dynamics.

Miss Meisle's opulent voice, notably wide in range and smooth in the difficult transitional point between dark and light tones, is eloquent in both dramatic and lyric moods. Her choice of songs displayed these emotional phases to advantage, and afforded a welcome relief from the hackneyed. The fine aria by Arthur Goring Thomas deserved its resurrection, and the lieder by Schumann and Strauss fell agreeably on the ear after long absence.

One commends Miss Meisle also for having selected one of Rakhmaninov's greatest songs, far superior to the more familiar "In the Silence of the Night" and "Floods of Spring." No rhetorical flourishes detract from the dignity and simplicity of "As Fair Is She," which is compounded of pure lyricism. One wishes that she had associated it in the concluding group with worthier companions—say three of Hugo Wolf's lieder.

Mr. Feuermann's virtuosity had its climactic moment in his arrangement of Sarasate's piece of violin wizardry. The performance was an amazing exhibition of technical skill, a tour de force of sheer facility. One found more musical satisfaction, however, in his thoughtful reading of the Bach sonata, his humor and grace in the Beethoven variations, and his splendid playing of Ernest Bloch's poignantly beautiful "Prayer."

In his dextrous fingering and clean bowing, he is a master of his instrument, with but few compeers. That mastery alone would entitle him to distinction, were it not ennobled by his interpretative profundity and subtlety. Since Pablo Casals seems to have deserted the American scene, Emanuel Feuermann is elected with Felix Salmond and Horace Britt as my favorite triumvirate of violoncellists.

Miss Skinner Is Week's Star In the Theater

Famous Diseuse Brings Her Noted Dramatic Sequences to National Stage.

Beginning next Monday night in the National Theater the attraction will be Cornelia Otis Skinner, in a series of her most pretentious "dramatic sequences," augmented by a selected roster of her short character sketches, to which several new ones have been added since the last appearance here of this distinguished diseuse. "Manosion on the Hudson," "The Loves of Charles II" and the "Wives of Henry VIII" will comprise the major items of Miss Skinner's bill. The days and evenings upon which these precious things will be played will be found fully enunciated in the advertising columns. Miss Skinner possesses the rare attribute of being able to people the stage with vibrant personalities when she, as a matter of fact, is the only visible actress occupying it.

Gladys Swarthout and John Boles are the singing and acting stars of "The Rose of the Rancho," which will come to the screen at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. This musicalized translation of the Richard Walton Tully and David Belasco script to the uses of the celluloids has lost a great deal of its original power, but still is a fine demonstration of what "horse opera" really can become. It is "horse opera" because a great deal of the action is exemplified by rough riding and during this turbulent action much splendid singing is done. Toby Wing, in person, will headline the vaudeville bill.

• • • •

Herbert Marshall and Jean Arthur are the pictured stars of "If She Could Only Cook," which is coming to the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater beginning tomorrow. The supporting cast is one of the most notable of the season. A new troupe of Maj. Bowes' "Amateurs on Tour" will supply the complete vaudeville bill for the week. Among these 21 aspirants for stage fame are said to be at least two who can qualify for big-time consideration. That is enough to establish Maj. Bowes as a prime picker of embryo talent.

RKO-Keith's Theater is holding over for a third week that splendid example of Miss Irene Dunne's artistry, "The Magnificent Obsession," which ought to be testimony enough as to the exceptional quality of a film which was supposed to be a "flop" without Fred Astaire in it, he having been supposed, in a few isolated quarters, to have been the mainspring for "Roberta"—which he was not.

• • • •

At the Warner Brothers Metropolitan next week, beginning tomorrow, the major screen feature will be "The Lone Wolf Returns," in which the principal male role is played by Melvyn Douglas, with the foremost feminine part discreetly cast to Gail Patrick, one of the Southern beauties of the celluloid drama. The bill will be completed by short-reel subjects and full newsreel.

• • • •

At the Belasco Theater for the current wek is an attraction that will be found reviewed in other columns of today's issue of The Post. It is not a completely pleasant picture, but it may appeal to some—and the supplementaries are not so bad.

• • • •

For the ensuing week on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater the chief film feature will be "Ah, Wilderness," with Joe Morrison in "It's a Great Life," the succeeding attraction. The bill, as usual, will be augmented by abbreviated camera subjects.

• • • •

The Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the usual Sunday matinee, will present "Roxanne," the former Mrs. "Kingfish" Levinsky, as star of the burlesque bill arranged for the Ninth Street Temple of pulchitrude.

"Roxanne" shared honors in sensationalism with Sally Rand at the Chicago Fair of latest vintage—there was an earlier one in 1893, you know.

Hollywood, Jan. 22.

WHEN a picture is being made it is often a contest between the star and the director. They both have their own ideas, and they both know enough tricks of the trade to get what they want.

By this I don't mean to imply that the performer and the director are always battling; they merely try to outsmart each other. The first day of shoting on the flicker, "Alice Adams," was really the initial meeting of Katharine Hepburn and Director George Stevens. The conferences didn't matter. They were now in the ring. Katharine Hepburn was the important box office star; George Stevens, the new director, with his first big assignment. Hepburn wanted to play the scene one way; Director Stevens wanted it played differently. They decided to "shoot it" Hepburn's way. Director Stevens continued to take the scene again and again. It continued all afternoon. Hepburn finally said: "How do you want me to do it? Show me." Director Stevens showed her—his way. Just one of the tricks of the trade.

Actresses have their tricks, also. Anna Sten, when making a long shot for a flicker, purposely would not pay strict attention to her make-up. A scene is shot from many angles; there is the long shot, the two-shot and the close-up.

Miss Sten would always look her best and play her best in the close-up. When the film was being assembled, and the scenes selected from the rushes, it was always necessary to pick the close-up, which was what Anna Sten wanted.

The tricks have been going on since the trade began, and they tell me that D. W. Griffith was the master. Those who worked in and watched the making of silent flickers relate how Mr. Griffith got a noted actress in the proper emotional mood for a certain scene. The actress had to lie on a couch and register anguish. The camera was focused on her face, and Director Griffith sat at the other end of the couch and tickled the actress' bare feet. She didn't like having her feet tickled and made faces, grand for the camera.

Such hocuc-pocus doesn't go on in the making of flickers now. The tricks employed by performer and director to gain their point are more subtle. Even the old standard of the director: "We'll shoot it both ways, yours and mine, and see how it looks on the screen," isn't used much. The actor knows his way will never get on the screen.

Many prominent actresses go along with scenario writers. If what the actress desires is written in the scenario, it stands an excellent chance of being in the flicker. Kay Francis met Delmar Daves when he was working on the script of a flicker for her.

Actors and actresses have their own cute tricks which they use to try to take a scene from each other; or at least, try to attract the audiences' attention to them. The most obvious is the actor who will make any movement other than the scene calls for, such as swinging a watch chain, to gain attention.

Champion Detroit Tigers Bolster Team With 16 New Players

With Shirley Povich

BIG BILL TILDEN, playing partner of Tilden's Tennis Tours, Inc., sprawled himself across a divan in his hotel room here yesterday, brought his long legs into play to nudge his traveling bags into position to form a perfect foot rest and unburdened himself to this department anent professional tennis.

POVICH.

"It's not a show that we put on for the spectators," he said. "It's simply good tennis. It's bound to be good tennis. Hell's bells, there isn't an amateur player in America who could give we pros a good workout. In two months in the professional game, a player can learn more about tennis tactics than he can in a lifetime as an amateur. It's the competition we face that really brings one out.

"Why, I never had more than one tough match in a tournament—two at the most. The tournaments usually lasted a week and they were just a breeze for a good player who was usually facing a lot of chumps. But when you're on tour with the pros you're meeting a good man every night—five nights a week. It's bound to improve you're game. Make allowances for my age, and I'm a better player now than I was when I was winning seven American championships.

"Because we play better tennis, we're more spectacular. I don't mean that you see those do-or-die headlong dives that the college kids make in an attempt to return a ball. That stuff is out in pro tennis. We keep that old ball in play; we don't miss the easy shots and we give the fans entertainment by sheer good tennis, not by the old rah-rah stuff, which after all is acrobatics, not tennis."

BIG BILL, who, as an amateur, could work up a fine case of scorn for the gallery at every infraction of rigid spectator decorum, now, as a pro, pays compliment to the intelligence of tennis fans.

"It would be absurd for we pros to attempt to kid the tennis public by exchanging victories or otherwise drawing a match close in an attempt to make it exciting. The tennis fan knows when a player is letting up or giving anything else than his best. It may be good business for the wrestlers or the fighters to win or lose according to the prescriptions of the management, but we tennis players can't afford to do less than give our best. It spoils the show."

To emphasize his point, Tilden recalled that when he first went on tour with Karl Kozeluh after abandoning his amateur status, he defeated Kozeluh in 23 out of their first 24 matches. That, he declared, illustrated the honesty of pro tennis. He might easily have dropped a few matches to Kozeluh in an effort to maintain interest in their rivalry, he pointed out, but public confidence in pro tennis would have suffered.

"It was the same with Vines and Stoeffen," Tilden declared. "I think Vines beat Stoeffen in something like 24 straight matches. That kind of a result might have removed all the suspense, but despite Stoeffen's consistent defeats the fans saw fine tennis. It was the same with myself and Barnes. I was always a 4-to-1 bet to beat Barnes but the public cared who won as long as we showed 'em good tennis.

In Short——

Tilden calls Jane Sharp a more brilliant tennis player than Ethel Burkhardt Arnold . . . but notes that Miss Sharp lacks Mrs. Arnold's steadiness . . . he contemplates a tour of Japan next summer after a sojourn in Hollywood, where he will play the lead in a movie with a tennis background . . . Big Bill admits that he has often chucked a game or a set to conserve his energy for a later assault, but his will to win as a professional is no less great than it was as an amateur . . . it is his opinion that amateur tennis now needs the pros to a greater degree than the pros need the amateurs . . . and that pro tennis can afford to be independent and aloof until the amateur people abrogate the silly rule forbidding open tournaments . . . if the pros and amateurs were to clash in a tournament this year, no amateur player would advance beyond the third round, according to Tilden . . . the loss of the upper part of the middle finger on his racquet hand, suffered as a result of an infection, has not handicapped his play in the least, Big Bill says, modestly . . . and he says, furthermore, that amateur tennis players with their big expense accounts an' everything cannot chisel more than $200 in profit over a season's play.

Higgins, A's Star, Yearns To Be Traded to Yankees

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Jan. 22.—Persistent reports that Connie Mack has a price tag of from $75,000 to $100,000 on Frank (Pinky) Higgins caused the Philadelphia Athletics' third sacker today to comment:

"It's heck to be worth that much and have so little."

Reports that Higgins might go to the New York Yankees prompted Higgins to say:

"It would be pretty tough to leave Mr. Mack. He's a great guy. But it's only natural for a ball player to want to be on a club he thinks is a pennant contender—and those Yankees don't look bad on paper.

"I'm not a dissatisfied ball player. I never have been. If I stay in Philadelphia I'll do my best—just the same as I would if sent to Yankee Stadium."

Higgins, who batted .296 and fielded sensationally last season after losing a month at the start with a lame ankle, has been running on quail hunts during the winter months and looks in the pink.

The third baseman reportedly receives a salary of $10,000 annually. He said he didn't expect to have any contract trouble this year.

Gulli Rolls 362 Set As Team Wins Trio

Lorraine Gulli aided the Lucky Strike girls in their bid to overtake the leading Rosslyn team in the Ladies' District League last night at the Lucky Strike Alleys shooting a 362 set in her team's three victories over the Swanee team. Catherine Quigley also played a feature part for the victors, chipping the maples for a 130 game. Swanee's bid for a win in the final game fell short by but two pins. Lucille Young, Swanee's chief contender for the individual average crown, picked up a few pins on her 110 average with a 346 set.

Outclassing Seal Construction in all three games, the Three A's continued its leadership of the Takoma Duckpin Association League last night at the Takoma drives. The pace-setters chipped in a 642 game and a season record set of 1,845 in gaining the clean sweep. The second-place Dome Oil team lost ground in dropping the odd game to Takoma Motor, taking its only decision when Jerry Cowden toppled the maples for a 145 game. Takoma Lunch failed to profit by John Berger's 393 set and bowed twice to the Fruit Growers. Smith & Murphy swamped Columbia Wall Paper No. 2 and Stevens-Warner upset Colorado Service twice.

Blair Rallies to Down Sherwood Five, 30-20

Montgomery Blair High overcame a stubborn Sherwood High five yesterday, 30-20, at Sandy Spring and tied Rockville for second place among Montgomery County schools. A last quarter rally provided the winning margin.

The Silver Springers were off to an early 6-to-0 lead and led at the quarter, 8 to 2, but when "Stew" Burger, the winners' star, was taken out in the second quarter the Sherwood boys quickly tied the score and went ahead 12-10 at half-time. Dick Lansdale scored all the Sandy Spring points in the first half.

Wash. College Foe Of Terps Tonight

Maryland entertains Washington College tonight at College Park in the lone basketball attraction available for local fans, as Catholic University's representatives meet St. Joseph's at Philadelphia in the last game of their two-day stand.

Meanwhile Coach Freddy Mesmer will be polishing up Georgetown's dribblers for tomorrow night's important Eastern Conference game with Carnegie Tech at Tech High School. It is possible for the Hoyas to assume the league lead by whipping the Plaid.

Carnegie will present the tallest team to show here this winter. It has a couple of lads well over 6 feet available for center and the squad averages well over 6 feet. Bernie Greenberg, the leading scorer, is the smallest man on the squad, however, measuring only 5 feet 5 inches.

Dead Heat for Second Is Run at Santa Anita

Los Angeles, Jan. 22 (AP).—Orthodox and Golden Ivy, a pair of 2-year-olds, finished in a dead heat for second place in the first race at Santa Anita Park today.

Numerous dead heats have occurred in first places, but records fail to show a tie between horses running second.

Jockey Charley Kurtsinger was aboard Orthodox and Johnny Rejshak was up on Golden Ivy.

The race, an $800 claiming event, was won by Half Time, which paid $4.20, $2.60 and $3.60 for a $2 ticket.

Ousting of Spears Asked at Wisconsin

Student Paper Demands Faculty Control.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 22.—Dismissal of Dr. Clarence W. Spears as head football coach at the University of Wisconsin was urged today by the Daily Cardinal, student newspaper, in an editorial demanding complete faculty control of intercollegiate athletics.

The paper said the coach should be dismissed on the basis of findings of the athletic board in a recent investigation.

The Cardinal also recommended that Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, athletic director, be given "a definite grant of authority in carrying out the duties of his office."

The investigatoin of the athletic board referred to was made after John Golemgeske, football captain-elect, had accused Dr. Meanwell of pushing the circulation of a petition to oust Dr. Spears.

D.C. Committee Gets Racing Measure

Speedy Passage Predicted by Mrs. Norton; Senate Is Hurdle.

FATE of the District racing bill was placed yesterday in the hands of a House District subcommittee headed by Representative Vincent L. Palisano (Democrat), of Maryland. Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, whose State derives much revenue from its race tracks, has been active in opposition to legalization of racing in the District.

The District racing bill was introduced by Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee. Mrs. Norton predicted a prompt and favorable report on the measure by her committee and passage by the House.

Enactment of the bill was prevented two years ago by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas. It had been passed by the House. During the closing days of the session when there was no question about passage of the bill if it were brought to a vote, Senator Capper objected to its consideration when it was called on the Senate calendar.

No Apologies.

"I make no apologies for objecting to the bill," Senator Capper said. "If I had not done so there were other Senators who would have done so."

There doesn't seem to be much doubt the bill will be passed by the House. The Senate is the big hurdle. Though a majority of the Senators may be favorable to the measure there is none willing or able to take the burden to force the bill to consideration on the floor and a vote there. A record vote would have repercussions back home. Whether the President would sign the bill, if enacted, is another question.

With Laurel, Bowie, Pimlico, Havre de Grace, and some minor tracks operating in their State, all of which produce revenue for the State, Senator Tydings and other Maryland representatives are determined the bill shall not be enacted.

Norport Five Rated Best in Southland

EXCUSING themselves for their miserable showing last week against the Alabama Pitts All Stars, the Heurich Brewers today prepared three stern drills this week in prepping for the Norport Crimsons Sunday.

The Brewers' alibi was that they were cold and stiff-jointed from the long auto ride from Pittsburgh and got right out of their cars into uniforms before playing Pitts' team.

The Norport Crimsons will line up as follows:

Tommy Johnson, Lucient Cox and Henry Sturm, all former University of Virginia stars; Handy Moore, former Hampden-Sydney ace; Paul Powell, of V. P. I., and Ray Rex, former North Carolina State forward and all-Southern selection in 1931.

The team is coached by Pip Koehler, who played with Penn State and Fort Wayne, Ind., in the American League. Koehler combined the squads of Norfolk and Portsmouth to make one of the best pro court outfits in the South.

The game will be preceded by two preliminary contests.

Landon Prep Rallies To Beat Briarley Five

Trailing until midway in the third quarter, Landon Prep rallied to defeat the Briarley courtmen, 29 to 24, yesterday in the Kensington gymnasium. It was Landon's first victory in four starts this season.

Briarley got off to a flying start, maintaining an 8 to 5 edge at the quarter and leading, 18 to 14, at half time. Soon after the intermission Crocker sank a long one for Landon and Myers followed up to tie the score at 18-all. Landon went ahead on Crocker's snowbird and won going away.

Hollywood Franchise Shifted to San Diego

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 22 (AP).—The Hollywood baseball franchise in the Coast League will be transferred to San Diego for the 1936 season, H. W. Lane, president of the club, said today.

The only provision is that San Diego provide a suitable park.

Lane said rental for his club at Wrigley Field, Los Angeles, where Hollywood has played for several years, was too high, and that it was imperative he move elsewhere.

Boxing Body Gives Bath License

Center of Wrangle Is Awarded Right to Fight in N. Y.

Jacobs' Suspension in Cuba Overruled by Commission.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Hank Bath, Fort Morgan, Colo., heavyweight who was barred from appearing in a bout in Madison Square Garden recently, will be granted a license in this State, the New York State Athletic Commission announced at today's meeting.

Bath and his manager, Jack Kearns, will be granted licenses on the recommendation of the California commission, which previously wired the New York board that two of the young Colorado heavyweight's bouts were questionable.

Jacobs Is Absolved.

Other boxing developments today were:

1. The commission ruled that the Havana Boxing Commission's suspension of Promoter Mike Jacobs and one of Joe Louis' managers, Julian Black, was out of line.

2. Promoter Jacobs announced that Louis will not fight again until he meets Max Schmeling, of Germany, this summer.

3. Primo Carnera, who arrives from Italy tomorrow, will meet Andre Lenglet, French heavyweight, if the latter defeats Hans Birkie in his American debut at the Garden Friday night.

After hearing the explanations of Jacobs and Black regarding the ill-fated Louis-Gastanaga bout in Havanna, the commission refused to concur with the Cuban board's six-month suspension of Jacobs and three-month suspension of Black. The New York board also declined to assist in collecting the $500 fine levied on Jacobs, and the $700 allegedly due Gasatanaga for expenses.

Jacobs said he had paid off more than $7,500 in Havana, all of which was a total loss. He also pointed out that he was not licensed in Cuba, so could not be suspended there.

Avoid Risk to Louis.

Hopes that Louis might meet Abe Feldman, New York, in Detroit January 31, were blasted when Jacobs said he definately had decided against the Brown Bomber fighting again before meeting Schmeling because of the danger of his valuable heavyweight injuring himself.

Lenglet's showing in the gym has won him praise from many veteran managers who believe he may develop into a title contender. "I believe he is better than Georges Carpentier," remarked Billy Gibson, former pilot of Genie Tunney and Benny Leonard.

Maxie's Manager In Legal Hot Water

Alleged Contract Breach May Cost Hoffman Million.

By the Associated Press.

Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 22.—Superior Judge Malcolm C. Glenn held today that J. Hamilton Lorimer, Oakland fight promoter, can share with Ancil Hoffman in the earnings of Max Baer since 1831, a decision estimated to involve more than $1,000,000.

The court ruled that Baer, former heavyweight boxing champion, acted without right in terminating a contract when Lorimer was his manager in 1931 and in contracting with Hoffman to manage him.

Baer, in breaking the contract, accused Lorimer of mishandling his affairs.

Freddie Miller Draws California Suspension

San Jose, Calif., Jan. 22 (AP).—Freddie Miller, of Cincinnati, recognized as world's featherweight champion by the National Boxing Association, was suspended today from California rings for 90 days for failure to appear for a fight here last night against Angus Smith, Santa Barbara Negro. Shortly before the fight he telephoned from Los Angeles that he had hurt his hand.

The suspension automatically takes effect in New York, Illinois and Missouri.

Torrance Will Defend Indoor Shot-Put Title

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Jack Torrance, Louisiana giant, will defend his national A. A. U. indoor shot-put title at Madison Square Garden February 22, Secretary Dan Ferris announced today. Torrance holds the world's record of 57 feet 1 inch. He opened his 1936 campaign in the Sugar Bowl meet in New Orleans, and despite his lack of practice tossed the 16-pound shot 54 feet 1 inch.

With the exception of John Lyman, Stanford, no other shot-putter in history has exceeded 54 feet in competition.

D.C. Ring Chiefs Act Against Colleges

District Commission Will Enforce Weight Rules Rigidly in Future.

THE District Boxing Commission yesterday ruled that in all future college bouts held here the actual weights of the boxers would be announced and that commission rules governing weight differences would be in effect. If the weight difference between two boys matched is greater than allowed under the commission regulations, as is permitted by the intercollegiate rules, the bout will automatically be cancelled.

The commission ruling on weight differences says no contest shall be permitted when there is a difference in weight of more than 12 pounds when the lighter of the two contestants weighs between 160 and 175 pounds. Ten pounds may be conceded when the lighter of the two boxers weighs between 135 and 174 pounds, and 6 pounds when the lighter boxer weighs between 112 (or under) and 134 pounds.

Under the intercollegiate rules, which govern college boxing excepting when modified by the commission, a 4-pound overweight is allowed in each class below the unlimited class and a 4-pound underweight is permitted in all classes.

Thus, under intercollegiate rules, in the featherweight class (125 to 135 pounds), it would be possible for the lighter boxer to weigh only 121 pounds and his opponent might weigh 138. Similar weight concessions are permissible in other divisions under the intercollegiate rules and regulations.

Benedictine Five Plays Catholic U. Freshmen

Benedictine High School, regarded as one of Richmond's outstanding scholastic basketball teams, will meet the Catholic University freshmen tonight at 8 o'clock at Brookland. Tomorrow night the Southerners play Georgetown's frosh as a preliminary to the varsity's game with Carnegie Tech.

Canzoneri Knocks Garcia Out in 9th

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Lightweight Champion Tony Canzoneri tonight scored a technical knockout over Brescia Garcia, of El Paso, in the ninth round of their scheduled 10-rounder at Star Casino.

In his first ring appearance since defending his title against Al Roth in October, Tony had considerable difficulty in disposing of his tune-up opponent, a rugged young Mexican who showed plenty of fight.

Although Tony's crown was not at stake, since both were over weight—Tony, at 138 pounds, and Garcia, 137—the Mexican threatened the champ's prestige until the seventh round.

In the seventh a hard right hook to the jaw floored Brescia for the count of seven. Two more trips to the canvas followed in the eighth for counts of nine and six.

C. U. Five Bows To LaSalle By 35-33

Schmarr Misses Easy Shot in Final Seconds at Philadelphia.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 22.—The Cardinals of Catholic University lost a hot game here on a cold night, when a last-minute field goal by Freshman Forward Frank Hoerst gave La Salle a 35-33 victory.

For the greater part of the 40 minutes the contest was close, although La Salle held a 5-point lead, 24-19, as the first half came to an end. As the second half got under way, the Cardinals staged a rally, the main feature of which was a cluster of 5 points by Bernie Lieb, and forged ahead for the first time.

It was nip and tuck the rest of the way. Hoerst took a pass from Kear and spun it a field goal which evened the count at 31-31. A minute later he dribbled in close and from a partial pivot sank the shot that won the game.

In the few seconds that remained, a long pass from Lieb left Herman Schmarr unguarded under the La Salle basket, but he missed the "sleeper." Schmarr, however, was the game's leading point maker with 14 counters.

Gene Ruark moved into a tie for first place in the District round-robin three-cushion billiard championships last night at the Lewis & Krause parlor by polishing off El Brin 35 to 9 in 36 innings. Occupying the top position along with Ruark are Everett Crouch and Warren Hoeke with records of 7 victories and 2 defeats.

In the other game Curtis Lamson won from Frank Masi 35 to 31 in 81 innings. Tonight's matches pit Crouch against John Gay and John Dodge against Henry Baer.

Mignone Hears Self Knocked Out

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—A few nights ago, Patsy Mignone, Bronx lightweight, sat by the radio listening to the bouts in a small fight club.

Suddenly he sat up with a start. He had just heard himself knocked out.

"Ho hum," yawned Patsy, "guess I must be getting punch drunk." So he stumbled off to bed and forgot about it.

A day or so later, one Bill Rosenthal, wrote to the New York State Athletic Commission to this general effect:

He had gone up to see his old pal, Patsy Mignone, toss the leather around. Instead, he found a "ringer" masquerading as Mignone.

"He couldn't have been the real Mignone," wrote Rosenthal, "for he took a dive."

A night or so later, Rosenthal said, he went out to see another of his pals—Nick Sandrine—in action. He was much chagrined to find another "ringer" impersonating Sandrine. This one also took a dive, he said.

So the much-harassed New York State commission finds itself up to its ears in another "scandal."

Chairman John J. Phelan has ordered Mignone to be on hand next Tuesday; also Jess McMahon, matchmaker at the club where Mignone allegedly was impersonated; also one William Stelling, who, McMahon says, made the match; also John Chappi, who operates a gymnasium at which Mignone trained and who was the last person known to be in possession of the fighter's license, entrusted to him for safekeeping.

Chappi told the commission today he either lost Mignone's license or it was stolen from his gymnasium.

Rosenthal's letter said Chappi acted as second for both boxers accused of doing impersonations.

Chappi admits he was in Sandrine's corner, but says the latter was the real thing. He disclaims any knowledge of a bogus Mignone.

.Pro Tennis No Racket, Says Mrs. Arnold

Bet on Selves to Avoid Rut, Acclaims Tilden as Vines' Superior.

DIMINUTIVE Ethel Burkhardt Arnold, the little girl with the Herculean tennis strokes, who arrived in Washington yesterday for tomorrow's professional tennis matches at Catholic University, was greatly shocked when asked if professionalism was a racket. Not hesitating a moment, she said with decision, "That's ridiculous, simply ridiculous."

"Well," her interviewer continued, "a cynical friend of ours tells us that it's a you-win-tonight I-win-tomorrow affair."

"To keep ourselves from getting into that rut, we always bet on ourselves to win," the attractive blonde, who almost single-handedly won the Wightman Cup for America last year, confided in a manner, which somehow disposed of the question for all time.

Mrs. Arnold thinks that Tilden, at his best, could easily trounce Vines, at his best. "Vines probably can maintain a greater sustained pace than Tilden ever could. But Tilden's inexhaustible repertoire of strokes and strategy stamps him as the greatest master."

Allison in Doubles.

Asked what chance America had to win the Davis Cup this year, Mrs. Arnold smiled a little and paid tribute to the prowess of England's Fred Perry, saying that, if Perry doesn't play, the chances of winning would be better. If I were to pick our Davis Cup Team, she suggested, I'd keep Allison just for the doubles and use Don Budge and Sidney Wood in the singles assignments.

A native Californian, Mrs. Arnold gave credit to Howard Kinsey for coaching her in the fine points of the game. It was in California two years ago that she first met and defeated Kay Stammers, the brilliant English girl. So it really wasn't such an upset in last year's Wightman Cup matches when Mrs. Arnold disposed of Miss Stammers to clinch the coveted silverware.

Before the present tour is finished, sometime next July, well over 100 matches will have been played in the United States and Canada. Mrs. Arnold plays Miss Jane Sharp, former national indoor amateur champion, and in their five matches she has yet to be beaten.

Jokester Wins, Pays $54 at New Orleans

New Orleans, Jan. 22 (AP).—Jokester, a 4-year-old colt from Mrs. J. J. O'Byrne's Stable, pulled a fast one on the talent today when he won the 6-furlong top event at the Fair Grounds.

Although winner of his last race, the son of Dark Jest was neglected in the betting and as a member of the field paid $54 for a $2 mutuel. It also was his fourth trip to the post, as he did not make his racing debut until early in December at the New Orleans course.

Rosenthal Is Elected Iowa U. Court Captain

Iowa City, Iowa, Jan. 22 (AP).—Sid Rosenthal, dimunitive senior forward, will captain the University of Iowa basketball team during the remainder of the 1936 season, Coach Rollie Williams announced today.

Rosenthal will succeed Capt. John Barko, forward, who completed his intercollegiate cage competition with the Michigan game last night and will graduate February 3. The captain-elect ranks as high scorer of the Iowa team, with 84 points in 11 games.

Sixty Oarsmen Report For California Crew

Berkeley, Calif., Jan. 22 (AP).—Sixty students, with bulging muscles and a collective ambition to see the sights of Berlin, marched into the University of California crew headquarters today to sign up for the 1936 rowing season.

One of the biggest turnouts in his coaching career had Carroll (Ky) Ebright as excited as a cat in an aviary.

Nine Hurlers Get Spring Tryouts

Total of 36 Men Starts Training Period at Lakeland, Fla.

Entire Country Covered by New Men Joining Pennant-Winners.

By the United Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—The world's champion Detroit Tigers will have ample replacements this season if veterans show signs of slipping, the official club roster revealed tonight.

Sixteen rookies will train with the Tigers at Lakeland, Fla., from March 1 to April 3. Twenty veterans will swell the total to 36.

Nine youngsters will be given tryouts as pitchers, but one of them, Roxie Lawson, practically earned his spurs by his performance with the Tigers at the close of the 1935 season. Lawson, obtained from Toledo, where he had won 14 and lost 8, hurled shutouts in his first two starts for the Tigers. He is a right-hander.

Other New Pitchers.

Other newcomers to the pitching staff are Donald French, who won 18 and lost 7 with Springfield last year; Joe Hare, who won 14 and lost 13 with Beaumont; C. E. Kimsey, who won 18 and lost 9 with Montreal; Pat McLaughlin, who won 14 and lost 9 for Beaumont; Ray Phebus, who won 15 and lost 10 for Davenport; Clarence Phillips, who won 20 and lost 11 for Beaumont, and Jacob Wade, who won 17 and lost 15 for Portland. All except Wade are right-handers.

Veterans still with the club are Eldon Auker, Tommy Bridges, Alvin Crowder, Elon Hogsett, Schoolboy Rowe, Vic Sorrell and Joe Sullivan.

Three catchers, all with the club last year, are listed. They are Manager Mickey Cochrane, Ray Hayworth and Frank Reiber.

Ten New Infielders.

Ten infielders will be taken, five of them trying to win a regular berth at third base, where Marvin Owen, regular last year, may lose out because of the newcomers and because he batted only .263 in the Tigers' pennant drive. Herman (Flee) Clifton is the only veteran endangering Owen's job, but Cochrane has picked up three rookies who are good prospects.

Outstanding is Chester Laabs, who hit .384 with Fort Wayne in the Three-I League last year. Cochrane is almost certain to keep him on the roster all year because of his power at the plate. He may be given a chance in the outfield, however.

The other rookie third basemen are Gilbert English, former New York Giant, who hit .328 with Portland last year, and Donald Ross, who batted .299 with Beaumont.

Howell on Hand.

Millard (Dixie) Howell, former Alabama football star, is another rookie infielder the Tigers have picked up. He needs more seasoning, and probably will be farmed out. He played with Birmingham and Beaumont last year, hitting .302 for the former and .313 with the latter.

Rudolph York, 200-pounder who hit .301 with Beaumont last season, is being taken along to understudy Hank Greenberg at first. Reports from Texas say he is a better fielder than Greenberg but won't be nearly so valuable at bat.

Charley Gehringer, star of the 1935 World Series, has no worries about his second base job and Bill Rogell, seems to be set for shortstop.

Only two rookies are listed among the outfielders, Hubert Bates, who hit .308 with Beaumont in 1935, and Chester Morgan, acquired late last season from Toledo. Ervin Fox, Joyner White, Gerald Walker, Goose Goslin and Al Simmons, the $75,000 former Athlettic and White Sox player, are the other outfielders.

Elimination Games Pick Olympic Five

Finals to Be Held in N. Y. on April 3, 4, 5, 6.

By the Associated Press.

The plan of selecting the American team for basketball's first appearance in the Olympics was disclosed today by L. W. St. John, athletic director at Ohio State University and a member of the Olympic committee.

The colleges will divide the country into 10 districts for elimination tournaments, but the method of selecting the A. A. U. and the Y. M. C. A. teams has not been disclosed.

Higher Cloud Plunges Through Puddles to Win at Hialeah

Natives Alibi As Rain Hits Florida

Handicap Winner Comes From Rear to Best Dancing Doll.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Miami, Fla., Jan. 22.—Typical Bowie weather greeted the sport of kings and customers here this afternoon and many wished that the plant had closed down and displayed a "double-header tomorrow" sign. However, there seem to be 7,000 people in Miami who will take their racing as they find it. To satisfy those who back their curiosity with cash, the show went on. Rain that began last night fell throughout the afternoon and sent the Flamingoes into a huddle and the Florida press agents into a trance. "Unseasonable," "rare," "most unusual," and like expressions fairly peppered the visiting vacationists with the natives doing the pitching.

Through the chocolate pudding colored stretch, Higher Cloud and Dancing Doll fought a thrill battle in the day's feature race, the Grade A Handicap, with the decision going to the former by a margin of three-parts of a length. Third in the vest pocket field of five came Polish Beau, a well beaten horse.

Winner Off Poorly.

The test was over the 6-furlong course and Dancing Doll, installed the favorite, fairly hopped to the front as the field left the starting gate. Earl Porter, the boy who is resuming his saddle career after having suffered a broken leg at Havre De Grace last fall, urged Dancing Doll along in a manner that brought false courage to her backers.

Higher Cloud, off poorly, was soon pressing the pace, however, and the two horses hooked up in a duel in midstretch. Under Joe Renick's whip Higher Cloud slowly but surely closed on Dancing Doll to catch her at the edge of the board and then draw out.

Higher Cloud was one of the outsiders, at a $17.80 mutuel.

Double Pays $51.40.

The secondary feature, the Grade B Handicap, proved a romp for Bright Haven, a popular Maryland mudder. The Bright Knight gelding made every post a winning one to finish two lengths ahead of Steel Cutter. The winner paid $7.30.

Daily double for the afternoon was at the rate of $51.40 for each $2 investment, that is, if you were among those who combined Lord Tournament and Speed.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PATTI, $11.50, $7.50, $5.00; DARK FRIEND, $6.10, $4.60; ALBINO, $4.30.

PATTI, displaying good ability in the footing, followed close to the leaders after getting away nicely, assumed command inside the closing furlong and, continuing with excellent courage under punishment, barely lasted to stall off DARK FRIEND. Latter raced straight and true in the middle of the track, responded gamely to punishment and was catching the winner at every stride nearing the finish. ALBINO maintained a contending position all during the running and held on with good energy until the finish.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPEED, $13.50, $9.90, $6.20; BRIGHT EMERALD, $8.40, $5.50; JACKFULL, $5.10.

SPEED, showing sudden improvement, opened a big gap on his opposition after going a half mile, and, eased around all the way while reveling in the going and held away without effort. BRIGHT EMERALD bettered her position readily on the outside, closed with good courage, but could not threaten the winner. JACKFULL, kept forwardly placed and hard urged, continued gamely to prove best of the others.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,200. Grade A Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:08. Start good. Won driving. Winner, Mrs. Emil Denemark's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGHER CLOUD, $17.80, $5.70, $2.60; DANCING DOLL, $3.70, $2.20; POLISH BEAU, $2.40.

HIGHER CLOUD, at home in the going, forced a fast early pace while in pursuit of DANCING DOLL, swung to the outside to engage the pacemaker midway of the homestretch, then drew out gradually after gaining command in the closing sixteenth mile. DANCING DOLL had much speed while setting the pace, saved ground, but could not cope with the winner when collared. POLISH BEAU was hard ridden all the way, but could not threaten the first two.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:41½. Start good. Won driving. Winner, Sage Stable's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT HAVEN, $7.30, $5.30, $5.20; STEEL CUTTER, $11.00, $9.30; BEAVERDAM, $8.10.

BRIGHT HAVEN, stronsly handled and showing fondness for the footing, assumed command directly after the start, shook off LITTLE DINAH after five furlongs, moved into a safe lead and had something in reserve at the close. STEEL CUTTER improved his position on the outside, rallied stronsly after reaching the homestretch and finished with a bold rush. BEAVER DAM raced in a forward position under strong urging, saved ground wherever possible, but faltered during the closing furlong.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:14. Start poor. Won driving; place, same. Winner, E. Craigie's blk. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RELATIVITY, $7.10, $4.10, $3.10; ROCKY PRINCE, $13.00, $6.00; MIXED PARTY, $3.50.

RELATIVITY, favoring the footing and racing closer up than usual in the early running, displaced MIXED PARTY when reaching the homestretch, withstood a strong drive gamely and just lasted long enough to stall off ROCKY PRINCE. Latter, rated off the pace for the first six furlongs, engaged the winner in the last sixteenth, finished gamely and just failed to get up. MIXED PARTY, placed on the outside for the start, broke sideways and had a lot taken out of her in setting the pace, tired after reaching the homestretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:42. Off at 5:44½. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, Mrs. Ethel D. APPRENTICE, going in smartly improved fashion, went into an easy lead after outrunning his field to the first turn, met persistent efforts from BLESSED AGAIN and held the latter safe under strong urging. BLESSED AGAIN made determined efforts while chasing the winner and was held safe at the close. FOREIGN LEGION obtained racing room on the inside when making his run and came willingly at the close.

Mrs. Moody, in East, Silent on Net Future

MRS. HELEN WILLS MOODY.

Wimbledon Champ, in New York, Occupied With Her Painting and Embryonic Book; Undecided on Tennis Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Helen Wills Moody's "poker face" puzzled the boys for many years and now her indecision as to whether she intends to return to competition this year has them guessing anew.

The California court queen arrived in the big town today and speedily sidestepped any reference to her tournament plans, if any, for next summer.

Except to say her game is stronger than last year, when she signalized a comeback by winning the Wimbledon title for the seventh time, Mrs. Moody was not talkative about tennis.

The purpose of her visit, which will last about five days, was to get some information about painting—one of her principal hobbies—and consult a publisher concerning a book she is writing.

"It's really a personal visit," she said smilingly. "It has nothing to do with tennis. My game? It's much stronger than last year, I've regained much of my speed and confidence."

Mrs. Moody has been working out several times a week with Howard Kinsey to speed up her footwork, the only noticeable fault resulting from her two-year layoff following her back injury at Forest Hills in 1933.

The tennis world didn't have an inkling that she intended to re-enter competition until last spring when she hurriedly packed up for a trip to Wimbledon.

Foresees "Sudden Decision."

"I haven't made up my mind about competition for this year," she said. "It was a sudden decision that sent me to England last spring and it probably will take an equally sudden decision to go back into competion again this year. I'd like to play in a lot of tournaments, but I'm not thinking about that now."

United States Lawn Tennis Association officials were as completely in the dark.

Fan-King

Is Edward VIII; Boxers May Have Run of Palace.

By Jack Miley.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—England's new King is a sporting man. Eddie Windsor, as he is known to the toffs around Albert 'All, does everything but pole vault—and like the fellow who was asked if he could play the fiddle, he doesn't know whether or not he can do that because he's never tried it.

Buckingham Palace will probably look like Madison Square Garden. There will be muffin-eared boxers, bull-necked wrestlers, plaid-pantied golfers, wasp-waisted jockeys and lithe-limbed cricket players all over the place. For King Edward VIII is a red hot fan who goes for his games in a big way and he likes to have his sports celebrities about him.

Eddie undoubtedly got his yen for fighters from his grandfather, who once had John L. Sullivan box a command bout with Charlie Mitchell. That was the match that the bellowing Boston Strong Boy threatened to walk out on, King or no King, unless an American newspaperman who had accompanied him to England received an invitation to see the scrap.

Britannia's new boss is on first-name terms with Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey, but Gorgeous Georges Carpentier remains his favorite beak-buster. While the Frenchman was no bargain when the bell rang—remember the battle of Boyles' Thirty Acres?—his pleasing personality sold him to E. Windsor and they're pals today. Georges will probably have the run of the palace, and Tunney, too, can tip a bit of tea with Eddie whenever he's in the neighborhood.

KING EDWARD became clubby with Carpentier when Georges dusted off Horizontal Joe Beckett in 70 seconds back in 1919. The sweet-scented slapper gave the Prince of Wales a few pointers and taught him not to lead with his chin. The orchidaceous athlete also showed Eddie a few dance steps that were then de trop in the Montmarte Wassail Salons.

When our Johnny Dempsey folded up the Frog, the broken-hearted Edward yelled Albion's equivalent of "We wuz robbed!" Not until Georges told him he'd overmatched himself did he forgive the uncouth Dempsey for his dastardly deed. King Edward and Carpentier gave Broadway's hotcha haciendas a live whirl during the Prince's American visit.

While he goes in for tennis, the ponies and polo, golf is Edward's No. 1 pastime. He is quite good at it, too. He shoots in the low 80s and is a cozy out at his short game. The best British pros have tutored him since he was a boy. Ted Ray and Archie Compston were two of his instructors and the latter is still on the King's pay roll.

Edward thinks Walter Hagen is the tops. The Haig won Eddie's admiration when he made his first invasion of England to the accompaniment of an amazing blast about the mediocrity of British golfers. Edward was amused when the cocky Yankee, refusing to use the tradesmen's entrance at St. Andrew's—as the socially inferior English pros were required to do—walked into the clubhouse dining room and startled the select assemblage by roaring at a white-whiskered old waiter: "Bay, bring me some ham and eggs—quick!"

The Prince knows his nanny goats, too. When he was over here he took $640 from the late Johnny Walters, the bookie, out at Belmont. It was the afternoon that Epinard raced Wise Counsellor. Eddie had the winner and he picked a couple of others on the same card. Walters made a hit with Eddie, and before he went home he gave the odds layer a crested calling card inscribed, "By appointment to H. R. H., The Prince of Wales."

12,000 Seats For Boxing Matches

Sponsors to Sell Stock to Finance the New "District Garden."

Site Is at Upshur Street and Kansas Avenue; Open in Year.

ICE HOCKEY, six-day bike racing, rodeos and many other sports known to Washington only by hearsay will become possible here with the erection of a new sports arena to be located at Kansas avenue and Upshur street northwest.

The site, which under present plans will be completed next December, also will afford an opportunity for revival of interest in track meets and may result in the adoption of ice hockey as a major sport by the four local colleges.

Martin Russell, a Canadian, has guaranteed backers of the project a team to be recruited largely from among Canadian players to represent the District in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, generally considered second only in importance to the major leagues which play in New York's Madison Square Garden and other large arenas. To introduce the sport to the Capital, it is planned to have several of the major league teams here for games prior to Washington's advent in the eastern league.

Turner Agreeable.

Promoter Joe Turner, local wrestling and boxing impresario, has agreed to stage at least one big boxing or wrestling match at the new arena each month. Local colleges have evinced an interest in the site not alone because of the possibilities it offers for the development of school hockey, but because it also will provide a suitable setting for more important basketball games and other indoor contests.

The arena, as planned, will cost $673,469, but the organization sponsoring its erection, which is known as the Washington Garden, Inc., is incorporated for $1,000,000.

The building will be 227 feet wide and 301 feet long, covering a total of 68,327 square feet. The hockey surface will measure 116 by 227 feet, as contrasted to the Boston Garden's measurement of 110 by 243.

The arena has been planned to seat 8,800 for hockey and similar games and 12,000 for ring sports. The arena will be large enough to house a three-ring circus, expositions, conventions, grand opera and many other activities.

Apply Today.

Permission will be requested today from the Securities and Exchange Commission to start a stock subscription plan. A ruling is expected from the commission within 20 days. Immediately the permission is granted work of razing several buildings now on the site will be started. The ground is expected to be ready for the start of building operations within 60 days.

Actual construction of the building will require about five months. It is expected the site will be ready to open on or about December 1.

Interested in the corporation sponsoring the arena are Harvey Warwick, a prominent architect; George E. Edelin, an attorney, and Grame Smallwood and Harold M. Major, realtors.

Ballston Is Swamped By Eastern Reserves

Eastern High invaded Ballston, Va., yesterday and handily trounced the Washington and Lee courtmen, the Washington-Lee courtmen, the Lincoln Parkers, who were upset last fall on the football field.

Although Eastern was using its second team throughout, there was never any doubt as to the outcome. Quantrille, of the visitors, captured individual honors with 8 points. At half-time Eastern was leading 17 to 9.

Ft. Washington Beats Bolling Field Quintet

Fort Washington's hard-working quintet chalked up its second victory in the Third Corps Area championship play last night on its home floor, defeating Bolling Field, 36-26, in a game that terminated in a protest by the Aviators.

Bolling Field left the floor with but four minutes left to play and Fort Washington leading, 36-26, and Referee Eberts awarded a forfeit to the home team. The Bolling coach removed his men in disgust because of the rough play which marred the action.

Yvon Robert Is Seen as Danno's Successor As Mat Artists Prepare for Jubilee Opening

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The grunt and groan racket will come into its own Monday when wrestling's silver jubilee begins with pageantry, pantomime, persiflage and burping befitting the noble sport.

Tonight's announcement that the tin-eared pachyderms are to have a silver jubilee must warm the cockles of every ardent mat fan but at the same time give them the stream-lined jitters—because this jubilee, alas, will last a full year.

This jubilee to end all jubilees will open at the Seventy-First Regiment Armory to commemorate the twenty-fifth year in which Mons. Jacques Curley, master mogul of the mat manglers, has been promoting. And the announcement threatens that every worthwhile grappler in the civilized world will perform at the armory before the jubilee is ended or subdued.

Old-Timers Galore.

Touching invitations were sent out tonight to old-time headliners of the hammerlock and half-nelson, requesting them to attend Monday's grand opening. These missives were dispatched to such chaps as Joe Stecher, Earl Caddock, Strangler Lewis, Sula Hevenpa, Stanislaus and Wladek Zbyszko, Renato Gardini, etc.—men who went to kindergarten under Prof. Curley a quarter-century ago at the Seventy-First Armory.

Although this jubilee is dedicated to the aerial mares and moans of the past, modern commercialism thrusts its ugly head right out of Monday's opening show. Because we find one Yvon Robert (pronounced Robe-Aire) featured on the card. Yvon, 220-pound, cantankerous Canuck from Montreal, by gar! is slated to match burps and grimaces with Joe Cox, alleged Texas cow puncher.

Perhaps it is symbolic—of something or other—that the Montreal mayhem master is making his New York debut on this historic night, because Rowdy Robert is hailed along Armlock avenue as the chap who will dethrone Danno O'Mahoney as heavyweight champion before the jubilee is over.

Last of Kings.

Although both Danno (he of the Irish whip) and Yumping Yvon occupy adjoining stalls in Paul Bowser's stable, Robert scorns the champ, and gave fair warning a couple of weeks ago that he intends making Danno the last of the Irish kings. Robert leaped into the ring at Holyoke, Mass., that night and whammed the startled Celt to the floor before Danno could say Addis Ababa. It was an impromptu match, entirely unscheduled. Robert attacked the champion just after Danno had disposed of Frank Judson, the old Harvard coach.

Now, my gay-plumaged amigos, if you know your wrestling it should cause no creakings of the cerebrum to recognize Robert's overt act as the build-up for a grudge match between Danno and Yvon—or, better still, a series of grudge matches.

Handsome Dan Parker, sports editor of the New York Daily Mirror and America's foremost authority on burping in all of its physical intonations and emotional caussations, believes that there will be three O'Mahoney-Robert grudge matches.

"Danno probably will win the first two, without discrediting Robert too much," says Parker. "And then, when its almost time for Danno to go back to Ireland and apply for permission to enter the United States again, Robert will pin him like mother did the rose on her girlish son, in the old-time song hit."

Columbus Ring Tutor Looks For Color

FOR the second consecutive year, Leon Shub, District A. A. U. golden glove lightweight champion, has been selected to captain Columbus University's boxing team.

Re-elected to his post without a dissenting vote recently, Shub will lead the undefeated Explorers into action at Joe Turner's Arena next Tuesday night, January 28, when University of Miami's huskies are opposed.

Encouraged by the progress of his 1936 Columbus team, Coach Bobby Goldstein promises to display some of the showmanship and color that featured the great University of Virginia teams, which Goldstein represented several years ago.

Wants Color.

Realizing that many college coaches are content to turn out winning teams regardless of how drab the performances of their boxers may be, Goldstein insists that the 1936 Explorers are prepared to make a bold bid for local patronage and will go their limit in an effort to do so.

Possessed of a roster that includes local amateur standouts in Henry Peterson, 126 pounds; Shub, 135 pounds; Bobby Rawson, 145 pounds, and Bob Grimm, 175 pounds, Goldstein insists that Shub and Rawson compare favorably with any collegiate boxers in the country.

Savoldi Faces Tough Rival On Mat

Managoff Short on Ring Science but Is Rough and Willing Mixer.

VERY little wrestling can be promised the faithful, who attend tonight's show at the Turner Agens. If any of the old masters, of the Frank Gotch and Farmer Burns era, should view the proceedings, they surely would not recognize this strange, strange thing called rassling.

Take the star of the entertainment, for instance. Joe Savoldi, the former Notre Dame football star, uses a kick-in-the-mush and augments that with many, many elbows and many, many knees, never for a moment thinking of such staid, passe weapons as wristlocks, scissors, etc.

Ivan (Wottalug) Managoff, Savoldi's opponent, is a typical rassling journeyman — which means that he spends his time battering, bashing and brawling. The closest Mister Managoff has come to the ancient art of wrestling in his two local appearances is in his hilarious version of the strangle.

In the other end of the double-feature, so-called, Dean Detton, the two-fisted cowpuncher out of Colorado, will square off with Irish Jack Donovan. Brother Detton performs his nightly stint with all the poise and science of an enraged bull, while Donovan is by nature never happier than when producing haymakers.

Both Detton and Donovan were imported by the management last year and have since been "promoted" to great popularity by the careful choice of opponents. A draw seems to be the only logical conclusion, but that's impossible because, although wrestling matches have been known to last four and five hours, there is an unwritten law in rassling that matches can't exceed an hour even when they are two-hour time-limit affairs. Kind of complicated, but that's the way it works.

Preliminary hostilities, the first of which starts at 8:30 p. m., involve Jim Cofield and Dr. Len Hall in one and Jim Wallis and Floyd Marshall in the other.

St. John's Wins Court League Debut, 34-22

EXHIBITING an efficient attack, St. John's successfully opened its campaign for its second consecutive District prep school basketball title yesterday afternoon in the Vermont avenue gymnasium by trouncing Gerogetown Prep, 34 to 22, in the league inaugural. Bill Counselman proved to be the scoring ace with 10 points, but with the entire team functioning as a man, an individual star was lacking.

Georgetown applied great pressure in the closing seconds of each period but could never get close enough to threaten seriously. If it had not been for the desperate efforts of the visitors in the dying moments of the game, it would have been a complete rout. The Johnnies were leading 32 to 14 with only three minutes to go.

While the Garrett Parkers were collecting only two foul shots in the first period, Giebel scored three field goals and Counselman and Swaggart one each to bring the count to 10 to 2 at the quarter. O'Shaugnessy, Georgetown's bespectacled forward, then scored from midfloor but Swaggart and Donohue quickly collected a brace of goals each to send the St. John's lead soaring.

It was at the start of the final quarter that St. John's removed any existing doubt as to the outcome. Clever team work and the shooting eye of Counselman piled up the score to 30 to 12 when Coach Joe Gardner's charges fought back with great fury.

A.A.U. Officials Plan Annual Tourney

Will Open Feb. 15; The Post Again Sponsor of Popular Court Play.

FEBRUARY 18 last night was set as the inaugural date of the District of Columbia Amateur Athletic Union basketball championship tournament which The Washington Post will sponsor for the tenth consecutive season.

Winfree Johnson, secretary of the A. A. U., and chairman of the A. A. U. basketball committee, again will be in charge of this, one of the biggest tournaments of its type in the Middle Atlantic section.

Johnson, meeting with members of his committee and other officials of the A. A. U., stated The Post tournament would be held either at Tech High School's spacious gym, scene of last year's games, or at the Heurich gym on Water street. Definite selection of a court will be made by Johnson in the next few days.

Competition, as in the past, will be in the unlimited division, where most interest is concentrated; 145-pound, 130-pound, 115-pound and 100-pound classes for boys, and unlimited division for girls.

Gold Medals.

The Post will donate trophies to each of the six winning teams; gold medals to members of the winning teams, and silver medals to the runners-up.

Also it was decided to hold the unlimited, 145-pound and girls' games at the big gymnasiums, with the 130-pound, 115-pound and 100-pound at boys' club gymnasiums until the finals are reached—then the smaller teams would be shifted to either Heurich or Tech High gymnasium.

Entries will close February 14, and should be sent to the Boys' Club of Washington.

It is possible, Secretary Johnson reported, that the national marathon scheduled here in June may stand as the official tryouts for the Olympics.

Entries are now being received from the District A. A. U. swimming championships and the junior national 300-yard medley and individual medley championships scheduled February 1 at the Shoreham pool.

National Dairy Plans $68,000,000 Funding

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—National Dairy Products Corporation was understood to be contemplating refinancing its $68,000,000 funded debt with a new issue of 3¾ per cent debentures that would carry warrants to purchase common stock.

The new bond would effect a substantial saving in interest charges to the company, as the issue now outstanding bears 5¼ per cent. T. H. McInnerney, president, stated at the stockholders meeting last April that the management was giving some consideration to a refunding program, but details remained to be worked out.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Resume Advance in More Active Trading; Industrial Shares Leaders.

New York, Jan. 22.—Stocks resumed their advance with a turnover that crossed the 2,000,000 share mark. Activity in other markets picked up, with reopening of foreign trading, and as a natural reaction from the recent dullness. Government bonds continued to fall, and dollars were weak with the repassage of the bonus by the House and the growing expectation that the measure will become law. Industrial stocks closed near their best with average gains of 1 and 2 points for the leaders. May wheat ended ¾ of a cent high at 100¾ cents a bushel.

Stocks were strong in both the higher and the lower floors. Shorts were squeezed in a number of the high priced issues when bull operators resumed buying. That gave the market its old time appearance of greatest strength in the high flyers. Gains of 1 to 3 or 4 points were made by Santa Fe, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Western Union, Telephone, du Pont, General Motors, Central Steel, Westinghouse, A. O. Smith, Montgomery Ward, General Electric, Corn Products, Deere, Glidden, Goodyear, Columbian Carbon, Sears, Johns Manville, Greyhound, Philip Morris, Spiegel, U. S. Pipe and Nickel. In comparison the low-priced shares were kept in the background, although strength was noticeable in Yellow Truck, Radio, Omnibus and Newport.

Rails as a group moved up 1 to 3 points. Southern Pacific was a favorite. Utilities hardened 1 to 2 points. Similar performance was given in the rubber, chemical, mail order, motor and accessory groups. Small advances were the rule among the oils, equipments, foods, tobaccos, amusements, merchants and airplanes. Coppers were well bought. Silvers were firmer. Libbey Owens rose more than a point of the higher dividend.

Higher Rates.

Two developments in finance attracted attention, the one because of the prevailing dullness in the money market and the other because of the nervousness with respect to French fiscal policy. Resignation of Premier Laval was accompanied by strength in francs, although recently the franc has wavered whenever a rumor of such an event was heard. Presumably informed people expect the succeeding ministry to adhere to the gold standard on the present franc parity. Doubtless also the franc is momentarily assisted by doubts over the dollar, a factor which is aiding sterling to rise.

Much is heard to the effect that French opinion is now prepared for currency devaluation, but the foreign exchange market does not say so. On the contrary, if French intentions were to devalue, it is logical to suppose that an attempt first would be made to learn something more of American currency strategy. Should the dollar again be cut, after franc devaluation, a fresh operation at Paris might be necessary.

In the money market the lifting of the call rate for loans secured by Government bonds was interpreted as an effort by the banks to get some earnings, rather than as a forecast of higher interest rates for the Treasury to pay and a stiffening of the money market in general. Dealers in Government bonds may find it more expensive to carry their issues, but in any event the move is not a reflection on the Government's credit. In their present state of helplessness the financing agencies of the Treasury—the banks—have little opportunity to show their real feelings toward Government credit.

Excess of Imports.

Although not a market factor, figures for our foreign trade in December, published by the Department of Commerce today, were interesting as showing the trend of our trade under highly adverse conditions of unstable money and restrictions of various sorts. The spurt in exports that took place in November gave way last month to an abrupt shrinkage, probably because of the screws put upon companies exporting to Italy. Imports, on the other hand, increased—a sad commentary on the fact that this once great agricultural exporting Nation is now a large consumer of foreign grain and meat.

Exports in December of $223,737,000 were $46,000,000 less than in November, but they were $53,000,000 greater than a year ago. Imports rose $17,000,000 over November, and were $53,000,000 above a year ago. The year ended with the largest dollar volume of exports since 1931. The gain over 1934 was 7 per cent, but imports were up 24 per cent, and the excess of exports, amounting to $234,226,000, was down 50 per cent from the previous year.

Gratifying as is the rise in our export trade, from the standpoint of payment balances, it is doubtful if we are having a so-called favorable balance. Imports of silver, which must be treated realistically as commodity shipments, amounted in 1935 to a net balance of $335,730,000. That means in reality we had an adverse trade balance in 1935 of more than $100,000,000. Just the same, that didn't help foreigners pay their debts with merchandise, for they sent us on balance $1,739,019,000 in gold. Incidentally, the export excess (including silver) was the smallest for any year since 1910.

Prophetic.

Omnibus Corporation was one of the most active stocks in the early trading. Possibly there was something prophetic in the decision of the stock exchange to give the stock a new symbol—OMC—in place of the old BUZ. Anyway, traders in the stock saw to it that the new symbol had sufficient advertisement. The stock soon came within a small fraction of the record high price, paid in 1926.

Du Pont.

Du Pont earnings for 1935, among the first of the large company reports, rose nearly 38 per cent over 1934, which is better than the average profit recovery in industry last year. Part of the increase came from larger General Motors dividends, but a little more than half the gain flowed from Du Pont's own operations. General Motors will publish its quarterly and yearly report next Monday.

C. & O., Nickel Plate Earnings Increase

Cleveland, Jan. 22 (AP).—Chesapeake & Ohio Railway reports net income of $30,893,494 last year, an increase of $2,976,248 over 1934 and the largest since 1930, when $34,132,940 was reported. December, 1935, net income totaled $2,662,897, an increase of $528,420 over the corresponding 1934 period.

The Nickel Plate Railroad announced today that its net income for last year was $1,115,929.07, an increase of $1,057,295.12 over that for 1934. The operating revenues for 1935 totaled $34,243,513.24, a gain of $1,099,648.78. It listed the 1935 net railway operating income as $6,759,546.57, an increase of $1,250,119.39 over 1934. The road's December net income was $327,603.58, an increase of $289,182.95 over the corresponding month of 1934.

New York, Jan. 22.—Cotton advanced moderately today on trade buying and a scattering demand. The buying was prompted by relatively steady Liverpool cables, a firm stock market and reports from Washington concerning the Administration's new agricultural program.

Banks Raise Loan Rate on U. S. Securities

Interest Is Increased to ½ of 1 Per Cent From Previous ¼.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 22.—The rate for call loans on U. S. Government securities and bankers bills was lifted today by New York banks to ½ of 1 per cent from ¼ of 1 per cent. The old rate had been in effect since mid-April of last year. Banking circles report the higher rate represents a further effort on the part of New York lending institutions to secure what they regard as compensatory returns on security loans.

The movement began at the end of October, last year, when the rate for call loans on ordinary stock exchange collateral was lifted from ¼ of 1 per cent to the prevailing level of ¾ of 1 per cent.

The new rate affects principally the discount houses which deal in U. S. Government securities, bankers acceptances and other types of short-term paper.

The houses customarily employ funds borrowed at call, especially at the time of new Government financing, to carry securities in portfolios while they are in the process of distribution to banks, institutions and other ultimate holders.

N. Y. Curb Short Interest.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

OUT of the chaos of the AAA Supreme Court decision comes a ray of hope for the AAA employes.

BAKER.

Most prominent among the plans for a new farm program is the proposal to merge the substitute for AAA with the Soil Conservation Service. This means that AAA personnel must have civil service status, inasmuch as Soil Conservation went under civil service last month. The quickest means for extending civil service to the more than 6,000 AAA employes will be by Executive order, which undoubtedly will be forthcoming as one of the first steps in the new farm program. Another means, held to be equally as probable, is that one of the amendments to the substitute AAA act will provide civil service status for the employes.

The personnel of AAA is recognized as possessing exceptionally high qualifications. Some time ago, when criticisms of "patronage" and "spoilsmanship" were mounting about the AAA doors, an impressive list of several thousand names was compiled by Representative Virginia Jenckes and Agriculture officials, showing the high percentage of AAA employes with college degrees.

William W. Harrison (P), PWA, who is chairman of the panel of the newly organized forum at the Central Y. M. C. A., urges all Government employes to attend the meeting at 8:15 p. m. today. Representative John J. McSwain, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, will speak on "How Can We Stay Out of War?"

Veterans' Administration Party.

Plans have been completed by Veterans' Administration employes for a card party and entertainment at Chestnut Farms Dairy, Pennsylvania avenue and Twenty-sixth street northwest, February 1, under auspices of Stuart Walcott Post, No. 10, American Legion, it is announced by William W. Watt, Veterans' Files Subdivision, post commander.

Emmett R. Carroll (F), is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Ira D. Scott and other officers of the post. A substantial list of door and table prizes has been made.

Republicans Select Food Cost as Issue

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 22 (AP).—Mrs. Wilma Hoyal, of Douglas, Ariz., director of the women's division of the national Republican committee, said today her party will carry the 1936 campaign into the home—to the women.

"The effects of the New Deal on the cost of living will be one of our weapons," Mrs. Hoyal asserted. "The woman in the home can see what the New Deal experiments are costing her every time she prepares a meal or goes to the grocery.

"Democratic women are falling in line. They don't feel that they are deserting their party in fighting the New Deal, but that the Democratic Party has deserted them."

Harry Sinclair Will Be Called In Oil Hearing

U. S. Court Delves Into Huge Profit by J. E. O'Neill on Texas Deal.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 22.—Allegedly huge profits accruing from a turnover in Texas oil were delved into today at a Federal court hearing on the Government's claim of $330,833 back taxes from the estate of the late James E. O'Neill, wealthy oil man and former president of the Prairie Oil & Gas Co.

Harry F. Sinclair, chairman of the Consolidated Oil Corporation and present owner of Prairie, is expected to be called to the witness stand tomorrow.

Today's principal witness was Col. Robert Stewart, former chairman of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, who was ousted by the Rockefeller interests at the time of the Teapot Dome scandal investigation.

The profits on the oil deal were alleged to be about $3,000,000, supposedly accruing to Stewart, O'Neill and two others from a turnover of 33,333,333 barrels of oil.

Stewart said it was purchased for Standard from the Continental Trading Co. of Canada, which had, only a few hours earlier, purchased it from Col. A. B. Humphreys, independent Texas oil producer.

The others alleged by the Government to have profited to the extent of $750,000 each from the negotiations were Henry Blackmer, now in exile in France after refusing to return to answer income tax inquiries, and Sinclair, who bought Prairie in 1932 after O'Neill died in France.

Allred Designated 'Most Outstanding'

Houston, Tex., Jan. 22 (AP).—James V. Allred, 36-year-old Governor of Texas, was named by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce tonight as the Nation's "most outstanding" young man in 1935.

Allen Whitfield, of Des Moines, Iowa, national president, presented the organization's distinguished service key to Gov. Allred at the annual banquet of the Houston chapter. It was the first presentation of what is to be an annual award.

Whitfield recited Allred's achievements in his first year as Governor—his campaign against "big shot" gamblers and other law violators, his leadership in the drafting of an interstate oil compact, and the establishment of the groundwork for an old age pension system.

Principles of Play.

Broad principles of play govern the proper technique of both the declarer and the defenders. There is a great number of these principles—to the novice, a bewildering number—and sometimes it is difficult to choose the right avenue to the desired goal. Conservation of honors, promotion of honors suit establishment—these are not flowery phrases; each is a terse description of a vital process.

Confining our observations to the problems of the defenders, it must be pointed out that a skillful defense rests on the players' ability to visualize the best plan of declarer and to render it either impossible or difficult of accomplishment. Thus, if an opportunity arises in which an advantage can be gained only at disproportionate sacrifice—such as cashing one trick that will set up two for declarer—the canny defender will resist temptation.

A Case in Point.

West, in the hand shown below, saw the opportunity to force the ace of trumps by using his measly three spot. He drove a poor bargain by doing so.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

SOUTH

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 heart	2 diam'ds	3 clubs	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	3 spades	Pass
3 no tr'p	Pass	4 spades	Double*

*Final bid.

The diamond seven was opened; East won and continued the suit, South ruffing the second round. Double-dummy play, involving the immediate lead of trumps and forcing out of West's king, would, of course, have returned eleven tricks by the successful club finesse against the queen. But this wide-open play certainly would have been exceedingly dangerous—had the club queen been "off-side" the declarer would have made only one club trick.

Playing more conservatively, the declarer led to the king of clubs and back to the ace, following with a third round which he intended to ruff with dummy's ace, playing either for a 3-3 trump break or a minimum penalty on a non-break. But West, seeing no farther than his nose, thought that dummy's deuce of trumps would be used on the club unless he prevented it, and kindly stepped in with his three. Declarer's problem was solved—he ruffed with the ace and returned a trump. Now, when West put him in the dummy with a heart lead, he had trumps enough to ruff a heart and draw West's remaining trumps for his contract with an over-trick.

A heart discard by West on the third round of clubs inevitably would have defeated the contract.

Housing Act Aids Told to Retailers

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Revival of the building industry and a lowering of electricity rates were urged before the National Retail Dry Goods Association today as two long steps toward economic recovery.

Former Gov. A. O. Eberhart, of Minnesota, terming the Federal housing act the most important and effective of the New Deal's recovery measures, called on American home owners to take advantage of it.

Eberhart, a member of the FHA board, said: "There is nothing in American finance so basically unsound as our old method of mortgage financing, and yet it has been tolerated because there was nothing else in sight until the national housing act placed billions of frozen capital at our disposal for building, repairs, new construction and refinancing."

David E. Lilienthal, director of the Tennessee Valley Authority, declared a general lowering of electricity rates throughout the country would release a purchasing demand that "would be a major factor in stimulating national recovery and re-employment."
